Murder Writ To Be Served On Virginian In Bay War

By Benjamin C. Bradlee
Post Reporter

The Virginia conservation officer whose rifle killed a Maryland crab fisherman Tuesday is to be arrested today on a Virginia murder warrant.

A Maryland and a Virginia sheriff agreed last night to arrest David Acree, 23, on the Virginia warrant.

They agreed also that George Colonna, pilot of the Virginia enforcement seaplane involved in the shooting, would be arrested on a Maryland warrant charging him as an accessory to the Chesapeake Bay killing.

The shooting occurred where the Maryland-Virginia line runs a jagged course through the bay side of the Eastern Shore.

The Virginia warrant for Acree was turned over last night to George C. Turner, sheriff of Northampton County, Va., Acree's home county. But Turner made no effort to serve it on Acree in Weirwood because, he said, "it would be foolish of me to look

However, only 30 minutes before he made that remark the Associated Press photographed Acree in nearby Exmore, Va. It is expected that the warrant will be served today.

8 Prostrated During Day

Night Thundershower Sends Mercury Down Six Degrees

The Washington Post
HEAT "WAVE"—A six-inch bulge in the asphalt on Independence ave. near 17th st. nw. hides the feet of Park Policeman R. N. Crack as he cautions approaching drivers

A thundershower which began about 9:30 p. m. brought cooling relief last night to most of Greater Washington.

Yesterday's high temperature simmered to 96 at 4:20 p. m.

Before last night's shower, at least eight persons were treated at hospitals here for heat prostration.

The shower, which brought with it promise of cooler weather today, caused the mercury to tumble from 86 at 9:30, when it began, to 80 half an hour later.

The shower came unexpectedly. The Weather Bureau said it resulted from arrival here of a cooler air mass from Canada. The air mass had been moving toward Washington during the day, but had not been expected until today.

The forecast for today was rather cloudy and not so warm, with more scattered showers. The highest temperature was expected to be in the upper 80s.

The heat caused highways to buckle in various sections of the city. A 6-inch bulge was noted along one stretch of road on Independence ave. near 17th st. nw.

Bacher Sees Atomic Power In Use Soon

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Atomic physicist Robert F. Bacher, a former AEC Commissioner, predicted yesterday that this Nation will soon have atom-driven ships and submarines.

This Nation, he said, is "on the threshold of a very great new development" in atomic power which will have a profound effect on the lives of its citizens. Great areas of this country now virtually uninhabitable because of lack of power and water, he suggested, may be opened up through atomic power which does not have to depend upon proximity of coal and oil.

AEC Record Defended

Atomic bomb production, Bacher told the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, "today is in the best shape ever."

Chairman David E. Lilienthal defended his record and that of the AEC as a whole by pointing to the commission's record of accomplishments.

"By their fruits ye shall know them," quoted Lilienthal, as he told the committee the commission couldn't be so poorly managed as charged in view of its remarkable production record.

In a voice frequently choked with emotion Lilienthal answered the charges raised by his principal critic, Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa).

Answers Hickenlooper

The commission, he said, has had one compelling goal—to give the United States "unquestioned and unqualified leadership" in the field of atomic energy.

In order to do that, he said, the commission has had to pass up some useful things it might have done and put up at times with some "careless, stupid and negligent" personnel.

Nevertheless, he insisted, the commission's results speak for themselves.

Referring to Hickenlooper's charge of mismanagement, Lilienthal declared:

"When the charge is malad-

Vandenberg Makes Plea For Treaty

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) yesterday invited President Truman to lead the world in a "new crusade" for peace as soon as the Senate ratifies the North Atlantic Pact.

Urging Senate approval by an "eloquent margin," he described the treaty as formal notice to would-be conquerors "that no armed aggression will have a chance to win."

Vandenberg took the floor in the second major Senate plea for the pact as House Administration forces proposed hearings on an arms authorization bill right after the Senate votes on the treaty.

House Foreign Affairs Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.), told newsmen the arms bill will get "top priority" in his committee.

Wants to Hold Hearings

"My idea is to hold hearings and report it to the House and if possible get it through this session," Kee said.

Vandenberg told the Senate that such supplementary arms legislation, if it comes, would simply "step up defense facilities in being" and not make of Europe an "armed camp."

But like Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) before him, Vandenberg assured critics of the program that supporters of the pact are not bound to vote for an arms bill.

Like Connally, too, he assured them a vote for the pact was far from a commitment to war. Rather, he said, it was the best way to discourage armed aggression and thus to stop another war before it starts."

Their combined assurances on every controversial point in the pact was having a shattering effect on the tottering opposition. For the second straight day, no voice was raised against the treaty on the floor although two probable opponents said they will speak today.

Leaders, who earlier had predicted a "no" vote of "fewer than 10," now placed the opposition count at "6 to 8," assuring ratification by far more than the required two-thirds margin.

Congratulates Vandenberg

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.), a potential opponent, said Vandenberg's speech had "gone a long way" toward meeting his objections.

Senator Arthur V. Watkins (R., Utah), the only member of the Senate proposing reservations to the treaty, agreed the Connally-Vandenberg assurances covered most of his complaints, but insisted they be written into the treaty. Watkins will speak today.

Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.), another sharp critic of the pact, was one of the first to congratulate Vandenberg on his speech. But Donnell told newsmen he will take the floor today. The presumption was he is still against the pact.

Vandenberg addressed the Senate from the "well" of the tiny, semicircular chamber. Senators normally speak from their assigned place in the Senate, and Vandenberg had to get unanimous consent to break the rule. There

Britain Halts New U. S. Buying; Won't Devalue, Cripps Says; U. S. Job Total Second Highest

Shortage of Dollars Forces British Emergency Action

The Background. For more than a century Britain bought more abroad than she sold. She more than made up the difference by her income from shipping, insurance and investments overseas. The war smashed the sources of this income almost beyond repair.

The First Response. Because of its lost income, the British government rationed food, banned luxuries, and clamped a tight control on the spending of British money abroad. To keep control over spending, Britain became banker during the war for all the countries, like Australia and India, whose currency was linked to the pound. All the dollars those countries earned were put into a "dollar pool" in London, and dollars could be drawn from it only with the consent of the British treasury.

The Second Response. To make up for its lost income, the British government set its people the job of selling one and a half times as much abroad as before the war, and almost twice as much as they used to sell to the Western Hemisphere. The United States gave or loaned almost five billion dollars to Britain between 1946 and 1949 for food and for bringing war-damaged factories back into production. The export drive went well as long as postwar shortages had to be filled.

The Slump. Early this year most American shortages ended. Prices started falling. Businessmen began to cut their orders for British and other foreign goods. The price of British colonial products like cocoa and rubber also fell, thus earning fewer dollars for the British, and American buying of these products dwindled.

The Pound. Although wheat, cotton and other raw materials were much cheaper, British-made goods were just as high-priced as before, because of the high costs of British production. Officially a pound sterling cost $4.02. Actually a $4.02 pound bought only about $2.80 worth of British goods. Some American officials began talking publicly about the need to lower the value of the pound. This, too, hurt Britain, for many held off in the belief they could buy more cheaply by waiting.

The Result. The slump in exports to dollar countries forced Britain to dig into its reserve and working capital, reducing it to a dangerous low. Yesterday Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps put a temporary stop to any new dollar spending which would further reduce the reserve.

Exceeded in 1948 Only, Says Preview Of Special Report On Business Pulse

By Drew Pearson

Despite talk of depression, the special congressional committee appointed to keep its finger on the Nation's business pulse reports that "employment is higher than in any previous year in history except 1948." In fact, says the Joint Committee for the Economic Report, "Recent data show an increase of nearly one million in June."

The committee staff hastily compiled this report over the 4th of July weekend—even while President Truman was preparing his economic message aboard the Presidential yacht Williamsburg.

Although the committee's report has not yet been made public, here are the highlights:

"1. Although unemployment in terms of 1948 records has risen, the best estimates show that it is not now at unreasonably high levels for the country as a whole.

"2. About 1½ million more persons are jobless now after allowing for seasonal influences than last fall when unemployment was at a postwar low.

Greatest in Manufacturing

"3. Practically all of the down trend has occurred in one field—manufacturing. Some declines in employment have also occurred in transportation, certain services, and mining. On the other hand, employment in trade, in construction, and in governmental activity has been holding up.

"4. Another factor contributing to the rise in unemployment has been a substantial increase in the labor force—due to natural population plus the return of many veterans from school without corresponding expansion in economic activity during the past year.

"5. The number of persons who have only part-time jobs and want to work full time has increased about one million in recent months. Most of the overtime prevalent in recent years has been eliminated."

New England Hardest Hit

Hardest hit by unemployment has been New England, where industrial jobs have dropped considerably. The most substantial declines were reported in New Bedford, Providence, Bridgeport and Waterbury. Seasonal gains in construction work have been offset by the down trend in manufacturing.

But the locality worst hit of all is Muskegon, Mich., where, according to the report, "by curtailment of factory production, unemployment reached a level higher than that of any major area in the country."

Drop in America's Purchases Blamed For Shrinking Gold And Dollar Reserves

By Ned Russell

London, July 6 (NYHT).—Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, today prohibited new dollar spending by Britain for at least three months or until a "long-term remedy" for the dollar crisis is worked out among the United States, Canada and other nations of the British Commonwealth.

He also reaffirmed that Britain will not devalue the pound.

Sir Stafford told a crowded and silent House of Commons of the Labor Government's emergency measures for handling the grave economic situation. He said international talks would begin this week with John W. Snyder, Secretary of the United States Treasury.

Snyder is due here Friday from Paris where he is discussing financial and economic questions with the French government and W. Averell Harriman, American Ambassador-at-large for the Economic Cooperation Administration. Harriman also is expected to take part in the London talks along with Douglas C. Abbott, Canadian minister of finance.

In addition, the finance ministers of all the Commonwealth nations—India, Pakistan, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Ceylon and Canada—will begin a conference with Sir Stafford and other British officials here next Wednesday. This conference will seek to "devise mutual cooperative measures" to deal with the crisis, Sir Stafford told Commons.

In an 18-minute speech, the Chancellor described how the vital gold and dollar reserve of Britain and the sterling area had plunged in the past three months from $1,884,000,000 to $1,624,000,000. Previously, two billion dollars had been considered the minimum for safety.

Sir Stafford blamed this "serious development" on a considerable falling off in British exports to the United States and, even more important, to a decline in American purchases of primary commodities such as rubber, wool, tin, cocoa and jute from sterling area countries during the past couple of months.

In the period ended June 30, he said, Britain's quarterly dollar deficit jumped from 328 million dollars to 628 million dollars.

Sir Stafford indicated this situation developed with startling suddenness. As a result, he said, the government ordered a "standstill" on new dollar expenditures shortly before the middle of June. The order does not affect existing dollar contracts, he said, but any new dollar expenditures will be approved only if there is "a clear case of urgent national interest."

Sir Stafford did not mention in his statement that persistent rumors about devaluation of sterling have produced a virtual "buyers' strike" against British goods and commodities in the United States.

He told a parliamentary questioner, however, that: "His Majesty's Government have not the slightest intention of devaluing the pound." This was one of the strongest statements he has made to knock down rumors.

The crisis is going to be de-

Hiss Counsel Calls Accuser Mental Case

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

New York, July 6.—Whittaker Chambers' spy charges against Alger Hiss today were assailed by the defense as the work of an unsound mind, "preposterous" on their face.

In a flailing attack on the prosecution's case, Chief Defense Counsel Lloyd Paul Stryker declared in summation that the case fails on two main grounds:

1. The heart of the accusations is the word of Chambers, a "traitor, thief, liar, perjurer, enemy of his country, hypocrite."

2. The prosecution, he said, has failed to produce any evidence beyond Chambers' testimony to support the charge that Hiss "furnished, transmitted and delivered" State Department documents to Chambers, as alleged in the two-count perjury indictment.

In more than three hours' argument, to be concluded with another hour of summation Thursday, the stocky, white-haired, 64-year-old Stryker verbally brushed an FBI expert's testimony aside that 64 documents in Chambers' possession were typed on the Hisses' typewriter.

He contended that the defense has completely countered the possibility that Alger Hiss or his wife

Final Action Possible Today On Housing

Hope for final congressional action today on the Nation's new housing bill was voiced by Administration leaders last night after conferees of both Houses reached agreement in record time.

The multi-billion-dollar measure, calling for construction of 810,000 publicly—owned dwellings in six years, is the first major victory for President Truman in his "Fair Deal" program.

The bill establishes a huge slum clearance program and provides farm aids.

The conferees agreed to accept higher Senate figures of 325 million dollars for aids to farm housing, instead of the lower 312 million dollars in the House-approved bill.

For the District, the conferees retained two major provisions keying Washington's slum clearance and housing program to the national system.

The National Capital Housing Authority was given site acquisition powers for public housing projects. The conferees accepted a House amendment offered by Representative Lansdale Sasscer (D., Md.) providing that the land must be bought within the District itself.

The conferees agreed the local agency was not to be given funds if Congress disagrees. The House had provided that either Appropri-

Emergency Fund Drive Studied

Prolonged Upswing in Polio May Make 1949 Worst Year

New York, July 6 (U.P.)—The country is "experiencing a prolongation of what appears to be a long upswing in polio cases," and the season 1949 may be the worst in history, Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, said tonight.

O'Connor called representatives of foundation chapters from coast to coast to an emergency meeting here, and disclosed that an emergency campaign for funds may have to be undertaken, probably in September.

"It all depends on how the increase of cases goes," he said.

The foundation's latest figures on polio cases this year show the disease is running ahead of 1948—second worst on record.

"Because of the continuing high number of polio cases each year," he said, "we are faced with a very serious situation. Many of these cases require care for years, with the result the case load increases each year.

"So far this year we have had 2718 cases as compared with 2006 for the same period last year—a rise of 35 per cent. And 1948 was a year in which epidemics developed so disastrously.

"Thus we are experiencing a prolongation of what appears to be a long up-sweep in polio cases. During the four-year period, 1941-1944, the Nation averaged 11,000 cases a year, but in the succeeding four-year span the total averaged 20,000 a year.

O'Connor and Dr. Hart E. Van Riper, foundation medical director, said researchers have found new clews in the battle against polio, and this is no time to cut down on research grants.

The foundation, they said, spent an estimated 17 million dollars in caring for polio victims last year, and at least five million dollars is needed to care for holdover cases alone this year.

The "hot spots" in the current outbreaks are in Texas, California, Mississippi, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Utah.

Area's 11th Polio Case Of Year Is Hospitalized

The Washington area recorded its eleventh polio case of the year yesterday as the Arlington Health Department announced an 8-year-old county boy was admitted to Children's Hospital on Tuesday with the disease.

The boy, who lives in the 600 block of S. Quincy st., Arlington, was diagnosed as a polio sufferer shortly after admission.. It was Arlington County's second polio case of this year. On Tuesday, a 19-year-old boy from the 3100 block of N. 9th st., Arlington, was diagnosed as a polio case at Gallinger Hospital.

U. S. Steel Refuses Pay Raise; Union to Discuss July 16 Strike

Pittsburgh, July 6 (AP).—The CIO-United Steelworkers Union today was told by United States Steel Corp. it could not raise wages or grant union demands for company-financed insurance and pension programs.

The union promptly scheduled a July 13 session of its potent wage-policy committee to discuss a possible strike July 16.

Contract negotiations between the big union and the Nation's No. 1 steel producer were recessed indefinitely.

United States Steel, in a three-hour session at which negotiations were resumed after a two-week recess, told the union wage hikes were out. "Big Steel" also said its refusal to discuss pensions could be arbitrated and that any insurance program would have to be paid for equally by union and company.

The steel workers are seeking a fourth-round pay boost. In 1946 the industry granted an 18½-cent hourly wage hike, then gave 15 cents more in 1947, and last year came across with 13 cents additional.

The current contract has almost a year to run but was reopened this summer on "rates of pay" and insurance. The contract permits a strike if no agreement is reached by July 16.

The union has presented all major basic steel producers with demands for a general wage increase, plus the insurance and pension objectives. But contract sessions with other steel companies have marked time, waiting for U. S. Steel to lead the way.

After nearly three hours in a sweltering hotel conference room, U. S. Steel negotiators stalked out leaving reporters a statement

Key to Ballot Vault Figures In Kentucky Vote Fraud Trial

Lexington, Ky., July 6 (AP).—The Prichard-Funk election fraud trial settled down today to routine questioning of precinct officers designed to show that 254 ballots cast last fall in Bourbon County were forged.

But first, the Federal Court jury hearing evidence against Attorneys E. F. Prichard, jr., 34, and A. E. Funk, jr., 27, charged with conspiracy in connection with the ballot stuffing, was told that the key to a vault containing the blank ballots was made available to a county official whose name already had been drawn into the prosecution.

Mrs. Grace Haskins Berry, former Bourbon County clerk, testified that she, at the request of County Attorney William T. Baldwin, left the key in her office the weekend before the election.

Her testimony followed a statement yesterday by United States District Attorney Claude P. Stephens that he would prove Prichard through "his friend Baldwin" had access to the ballots.

Mrs. Berry said she found the vault unlocked shortly before the election but the ballots were in the vault and she made no examination.

She said other persons around the courthouse had keys to her office. Baldwin, she added, had used her office to work at night for seven or eight years.

Dodge Whipple and Douglas Clay, whose names appeared on 20 ballots in Paris Precinct No. 1, testified the signatures were not theirs. Clay said it was not his duty to sign ballots. Legal ballots cast in the precinct were signed by Whipple and Bernard Santem.

Whipple said the ballots were torn from books at the rate of about one out of every five in the back of the ballot book.

Senate Unit Backs 2 Juvenile Judges

A bill authorizing two permanent judges on the Juvenile Court bench was unanimously approved yesterday by the Senate District Committee.

As amended in committee, a candidate for the proposed new judgeship must have been a member of the District Bar for at least five years prior to appointment and be a bona fide resident of the Washington metropolitan area.

Legislation to permit temporary appointment of one judge to Juvenile was signed into law two weeks ago to meet the situation created by the absence from the bench of Judge Fay L. Bentley. She is a voluntary patient at St. Elizabeths Hospital. The District Bar Association has strongly urged that the court become a permanent two-judge bench.

Among 10 other local measures, the Senate group also sent to the floor a House-approved measure to correct teachers' pay inequities.

110 Teachers Affected

The bill, affecting about 110 District school teachers, would put veteran teachers with a master's degree on a salary par with teachers, holding the same degree, and hired since the teachers' salary act of 1947 took effect.

In a compromise move, the committee defined the residence qualification for Juvenile Court candidates as including the District, Maryland and Virginia within 20 miles of the District line.

The approved bill also prescribes that candidates must "have a knowledge of social problems and procedures and an understanding of child psychology."

An amendment by Senator Margaret Chase Smith, requiring Juvenile Court to issue statistical reports on the court's easeload—but without disclosing names—was also tacked to the bill. A similar Juvenile Court measure is pending before the House District Committee.

NCPPC Expansion Approved

After a clash between local planning officials and Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, representing the commissioners, the committee also approved a bill broadening the National Capital Park and Planning Commission membership to include one Maryland and one Virginia resident.

West testified the Commissioners strongly oppose the proposed membership setup of 15, of whom the District would have only three representatives.

West also attempted, but failed, to strike out a clause giving NCPPC veto power over the Commissioners in respect to erecting municipal buildings in suburbs beyond the District line.

General U. S Grant 3d, former NCPPC chairman, replied that the city heads' insistence upon clear authority to build "anything they want outside the District" does not seem to be a "reasonable demand." The measure was favorably reported just about as drafted by NCPPC.

Other Measures Approved

In other actions, the Senate approved and sent to the floor, bills to:

1. Increase the license fee to practice podiatry from the present $2 to $5.

2. Remove the residence requirement for membership on the Commisison on Mental Health. The House District Committee will hold hearings Monday on an identical bill.

3. Authorize appointment of a deputy disbursing officer and assistant disbursing officers for the District.

4. Liberalize the Commissioners' authority to pay contractors for work after the project is 50 per cent completed.

5. Allow insurance companies here to buy International Bank bonds as investments.

The committee postponed action on a bill to grant District tax exemption to the National Society of Colonial Dames of America building at 2715 Q st. nw.

Trip Payment Query Riles Gen. Vaughan

Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan's temper was as hot as the weather last night when he returned from a 19-day vacation.

The President's military aide was met in the 92-degree heat of the Union Station by reporters who wanted to know about his voyage with 10 friends and members of his family to Guatemala aboard a United Fruit Lines cargo ship.

"It's nobody's g—— d—— business, and you can quote me," he exclaimed, when asked why the shipping line had been "so secretive" about telling who paid for the party's passage.

He promptly explained that each member of the party, which included his wife and two children, "paid $341 apiece for the round trip."

The general had been rushed away under police protection from the pier yesterday morning in New York, where the cargo ship docked earlier in the day.

A reporter for the Herald Tribune, questioned Vaughan at the pier in New York about his knowledge of "5 per centers" using their influence with men high in Government to get lucrative contracts for small businesses for a 5 per cent commission.

Vaughan scoffed at such questions here and said he knew "about 300 persons in Washington" engaged in esuch practices.

Portugal Heat Spurts to 158

Lisbon, Portugal, July 6 (U.P.).—A freak heat blast lasting two minutes shot thermometers up to an unofficial reading of 158 degrees along the central Portuguese coast today. Hundreds of persons were left prostrate in the streets and thousands of fish and fowl were killed by the scorching wave of hot air.

The phenomenon swept over a large coastal area following a hurricane which ripped through northern Portugal.

(In New York a weather expert said such a reading was "unlikely" although heat blasts often follow hurricanes in tropical countries. He said the highest temperature ever officially recorded in the United States was in California's Death Valley where a thermometer once hit 130 degrees.

(The National Geographic Society in Washington reported the highest officially recorded temperature anywhere was 131.4 at Arizia, 25 miles south of Tripoli in North Africa. It said the highest unofficial reading ever reported was 189 at Abadan Island in the Persian Gulf.)

The Portuguese heat blast first struck at the town of Figueira as thousands of women jammed the market place for their morning shopping. Many fell in the streets. Others, fearing the end of the world had come, knelt in the shade and prayed.

Reports said the blast felt like "tongues of fire."

scampered about open fire hydrants in various sections of the city. The hydrants were turned on by firemen cooperating with the District Recreation Department.

Shoppers jammed department stores in a rush to buy electric fans. Lansburgh's and Woodward & Lothrop, department stores, reported sellouts in certain models and a scramble to get deliveries from distributors whose own supplies were running low.

Swimmers were literally arm-to-arm in pools throughout greater Washington.

A spokesman for Glen Echo Park pool said 3324 admissions were recorded during the day. Record for the year was established June 25 when 4500 passed through the stiles.

Also a record water consumption in Washington and nearby areas was predicted by E. A. Schmitt, chief of water supply at Washington Aqueduct, which serves Washington, Arlington County and part of nearby Maryland.

Previous all-time high was recorded Tuesday when 231,500,000 gallons were consumed. The demand, Schmitt said, has placed filtration plant facilities under a severe strain, but he saw no immediate danger of shortages.

Yesterday was the fourth consecutive day that the mercury had risen above 90. On July 3, high was 91; July 4, 92; July 5, 96, and yesterday, 96, at 4:20 p. m.

The high reading yesterday was only 2 degrees below the record of 98 registered for the same date in 1911. Low yesterday was 78 at 6 a. m.

GOP Falls in Behind Rider To Cut Budget

Top Senate Republicans last night got behind a move to tie an economy "rider" ordering down-the-line cuts in 1950 appropriations to one of the last big money bills.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said strong sentiment for such a move developed at a meeting of the Senate Republican Policy Committee late yesterday.

Taft suggested the big armed services appropriation bill, which hasn't come out of a Senate committee, might be the logical place to tie such a rider.

62 Sign Resolution

A resolution requiring the President to make 5 to 10 per cent reductions below his budget in all 1950 bills already has been reported by the Senate Expenditures Committee and a petition supporting it has been signed by 62 Senators.

Senate Expenditures Chairman John L. McClellan (D., Ark.), whose name the resolution bears, has served notice he will move to call it up independently unless it gets a green light from the Democratic leadership.

Following yesterday's Republican Policy Committee meeting, Taft said the move to tie the cut to an appropriation bill wouldn't collide with separate Senate action on the MClellan resolution.

Veto Might Be Hard

The "rider" method would get the economy resolution into conference with the House even though the House failed to act separately on the resolution, legislative strategists explained.

They further pointed out that Mr. Truman might find it difficult to veto the ordered cuts if they are attached to a vital money measure.

Taft said the GOP policymakers thought it unlikely Congress would adjourn by August 1. Taft, himself, declined to "guess" about the length of the session.

He predicted, however, that the Senate wouldn't stay in session long enough to approve a Social Security expansion bill House leaders plan to put through this session. He said the Senate Finance Committee wants plenty of time to hold hearings on the bill.

Acheson Expects British Comeback

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary of State Acheson expressed full confidence yesterday that Great Britain could pull out of its present economic troubles.

He said he was sure that the governments of the Dominions, the continental European nations and the United States would be cooperative in the coming weeks and would help the British to work out a solution.

In informal comments at his weekly press conference, Acheson suggested that the "crisis" aspect of the British situation had been overplayed. If you are wise, he said, you reduce your purchases when your receipts fall off.

Temporary Necessity

This, he suggested, was what the British government was doing. He described the cutting of British dollar imports as a temporary unfortunate necessity rather than as a permanent solution.

And he said Cripps had been correct in telling the House of Commons that a more permanent solution lay in increasing the competitive efficiency of British industry.

Acheson said the present British difficulty had been expected ever since the general world-wide shift from a seller's market to a buyers market. The shift meant, he said, that Britain's dollar receipts were bound to fall off, and for two reasons.

Inventory Reduction

The first reason was that businessmen with goods on hand wanted to reduce their inventories and stopped buying, in the hope that prices would go down.

The second reason was that, with buyers becoming more choosy, sellers would have to compete harder than before.

He said the Cripps statement properly took account of both these changes; that Britain would have to make immediate reductions in purchases, and would have to become more competitive. The secretary described the situation as a readjustment which would have to be made until world trade could settle down into a more normal period.

On Capitol Hill a number of Senators were less philosophic about it. Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.), just back from a visit to Europe, said he was not surprised by the Cripps statement, but "it must be admitted that the unfortunate condition of this once-mighty financial colossus is shocking evidence of the changed aspect of the world today."

He said the British people deserved the aid America had given them. "Without ECA," he said, "this present debacle would have happened long ago, I am convinced." But the Maryland Senator said Britain's present condition was not a "favorable advertisement" for what he called state socialism.

Had Better Take Heed

"Those who are striving so hard here to bring about further Government control and regimentation had better take heed," he said. "Free enterprise in the United States looks far more inviting than does state socialism at the present time."

Minority Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) commented: "What they ought to do over there is cut the waste out of their government like we are having to do over here." Senator Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.) called the British situation serious, and said, "I would like to see every effort made to increase productivity in British industry before I would be willing to consider new economic aid."

Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.) suggested that the answer to Britain's financial problems might lie in emigration to Canada, South Africa and other sparsely populated countries, thus cutting down British consumption "without any serious offsetting reduction in her production."

Justice Douglas Arouses Suspicion of Russians

Moscow, July 6 (AP).—The Russian people learned tonight from their official news agency, Tass, that suspicious foreign mountain-climbers are now in Iran.

The Soviet agency said " a certain Douglas" has been climbing mountains in Iran and now is heading for Iranian Azerbaijan which is just across the Russian border.

(United States Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and his son, William, jr., arrived in Iran last week. They planned to attempt an ascent of Mount Demavend, highest peak in southwest Asia.)

Truman Plan On Economy Due Monday

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The condition of the Nation's economy and what to do about it was the prime topic of discussion in legislative, business and administration circles yesterday.

First, the White House reported that President Truman's midyear economic report will reach Congress Monday. Press Secretary Charles G. Ross described the report as "quite long" and requiring further study and consultation" before being delivered.

From other sources came the following developments:

1. The Commerce Department reported that a sharp increase in outlays by public agencies sent new construction to a record high of nearly 8½ billion dollars in the first half of 1949. This is 300 million dollars above a year ago. Private spending totaled 6.2 billion, down 5 per cent; public agencies spent two billion, up about 37 per cent.

Home Building Value Lags

The value of private home building lagged 12 per cent behind last year's record totals, although June was 13 per cent above May.

2. A Senate Agriculture Subcommittee heard three attacks on a plan to make a trial run of the Brannan plan on hogs. Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.) declared the plan would wreck the Nation's agricultural economy. He said to apply the Brannan support program to hogs would be disastrous to cattle growers. Instead, he urged that the present system of price supports at 90 per cent of parity be continued.

Hassil Schenck president of the Indiana Farm Bureau, said his organization fears that Congress wouldn't put up the money year after year to support the Brannan plan. He urged Congress to keep the present program—changing to a lower support level next January..

John E. Thompson, youthful president of the Reliable Packing Co., of Chicago, pork packers, said the Brannan plan would be unfair to packers, cattle, sheep and poultry producers. He said "Government agencies" had "taught the people a lie" about the benefits of the Brannan plan. Under questioning by Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.) he failed to name the agencies he meant, but said they were not "the Supreme Court or the Department of Justice."

3. The Committee for Economic Development attacked proposals to give the President power to impose direct control over commodity prices, rationing and allocation.

CED cited Administration proposals in 1947 and requests for standby control authority this spring. CED is a nonprofit, nonpolitical organization of leaders in business and education. It is devoted to objective analysis of national issues.

4. Iron Age, organ of the steel industry, predicted that the steel industry's operating rate for July and August will continue its decline. This will not mean, the trade magazine said, that "things are going to pieces in a wheelbarrow."

5. The American Iron and Steel Institute estimated steel production this week at 61.2 per cent of capacity—the lowest since December 2, 1946. Last week's rate was 79.9 per cent. Much of the blame for the drop was placed on the July 4 holiday.

At Paris Talks

Currency Devaluation Rumor Rife

By Russell Hill

Paris, July 6 (NYHT).—Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder talked for an hour today with French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, as rumors of a forthcoming devaluation of the franc and the pound sterling grew more persistent.

These rumors are feeding on Snyder's activities here and on the secrecy enveloping these activities. A strong impression was also made here by publication in the Paris press of the report from Washington that the National Advisory Council, of which Snyder is the chairman, has told President Truman the currencies of several western European countries should be "revalued."

Herve Alphand, director of the economic division of the French Foreign Ministry, at a luncheon of the Anglo-American Press Association today denied that Snyder and French Finance Minister Maurice Petsche had discussed devaluation of the pound or the franc yesterday. He denied press reports that Petsche had proposed the United States should raise its buying price for gold from $35 to $55 an ounce and should reduce its tariff barriers.

He did say that Petsche told Snyder France favored liberalization of trade, first in Europe and then throughout the world.

French and American sources maintained complete secrecy.

Recession Held Key to Soviet Tactics

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, July 6 (NYHT).—Russia's present "sweetness and light" tactics result directly from the Politburo's conviction that by September a widespread economic recession will force the West to go further than ever before to meet Soviet economic terms, a number of top western officials here believe.

The Russians aim at the maximum relaxation of international tensive in Europe, western officials think, hoping thus to influence Congress against broad economic and military appropriations. If a cut could be achieved, for example, in aid to Europe, this would help along an economic depression and hasten the time when western Europe would be in desperate need of eastern markets.

At the same time relaxation of tension should help Soviet satellites get from western Europe the products they need at the moment and cannot obtain from Russia.

Although western allied experts think Russian dreams of an impending depression are greatly exaggerated, there is rueful admission that economic pressures are mounting. Even if the smallest part of Russian predictions comes true, it will certainly have a bad effect in Europe.

More Working Only in 1948

Report found that unemployment had fluctuated around the two million level during 1947 and 1948. An unusually low figure for peacetime economy, this has risen to 3.8 million during the first six months of 1949.

Unemployment during the 1947-1948 boom years could be traced to temporary reasons such as material shortages, seasonal slowdowns, or in-between-job layoffs. The recent unemployment, however, has been more serious. For example, 750,000 unemployed have not been able to get work for four months—twice the number who had stayed out of work that long last year. In spite of this, however, one third to two fifths of those out of jobs this year have found work within one month.

More men than women have been thrown out of jobs as a result of the rise in unemployment.

Britain Prohibits New Purchases in U. S.

bated in Commons next Thursday and the Conservatives will certainly attack the government for allowing its economic plans to go wrong and for failing to halt a rising rate of government expenditure.

Contrary to wide expectations, Sir Stafford did not announce any immediate cuts in British imports of such American commodities as tobacco, gasoline, cotton and other important raw materials.

But he warned that after international negotiations on the whole problem, the government might be forced to reduce imports of some foodstuffs and raw materials from the United States. He expected a new import program would be drawn up by September.

He gave a broad hint that Britain's purchasing power would be used in the negotiations with Snyder, remarking at one point that "obviously if the United States ceases to buy rubber, jute and tin, then the rest of the world won't be able to buy from the United States."

Primarily, Sir Stafford insisted, the United States must resume its purchases of British goods and commodities in order to give the sterling countries dollars to spend in the United States.

He said none of the emergency measures would solve the crisis by itself. He called for a new nation-wide effort to boost industrial production and bring down costs so British exports can compete more effectively in world markets.

He also warned against any attempts to increase personal incomes by raising wages, profits, rents or any other method.

U. S. Foreign Traders Gloomy Over News

By Sam Dawson

New York, July 6 (AP).—Foreign traders today saw in Britain's latest curb on buying American products another push downhill for the United States' sliding exports.

They also gloomily predicted further losses of world markets by American traders to the British, who today announced a renewed drive to sell more English goods abroad. It came at a time when American-made goods are backing up in the warehouses because of dwindling foreign markets.

Sir Stafford Cripps' announcement today that Britain will further cut purchases from dollar areas was bad news for American tobacco, wheat and cotton farmers, and gasoline refiners. They figured thir products would be listed by the British as items they could use less of under a tighter austerity program. These products are all in surplus supply in this country and looking for markets abroad.

The report on Britain's finances was also bad news for exporters in general, who only yesterday were told by the Commerce Department that further slides in export volume in May carried American outgoing trade well below the monthly average of the first quarter of the year.

Wall Street apparently found the Chancellor's speech about what was expected, and stock prices and trading volume showed no immediate reaction.

The total of America's imports, from all sources, dropped in May to $539,400,000. This was 10 per cent below the first quarter's monthly average, and 9 per cent below last year's monthly average of 594 million dollars.

U. S. exports in May totaled $1,077,200,000. The first quarter's monthly average was $1,095,000,000, and last year's monthly average $1,051,000,000.

It is this large gap between the amount Americans export and the amount they import that has led to the world's dollar shortage.

Probers Refused Bookshop List

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Efforts by the House Un-American Activities Committee to obtain a membership list of the Washington Cooperative Bookshop were balked yesterday by the shop's board of directors.

Miss Elsa K. Miller, manager, and Mrs. Tilla Minowitz, a board member, both testified the board had voted not to turn over the list in compliance with a subpena. Both told the committee they did not know where such a list was or what officer or member of the bookshop was charged with its custody.

Miss Miller testified that addressograph plates used to notify members of meetings were in the shop when the subpena was received. But it was not there now, she said, nor did she know what had become of it.

They explained the board did not wish the list to be used as a "blacklist." When Representative Walter (D., Pa.), assured Mrs. Minowitz the committee had no such intention and suggested it be examined in executive session with her lawyer present, she still demurred.

Mrs. Minowitz said she "would have to think it over," but that she believed she would be inclined to "stick to the decision." At any rate, she said, she would have to take the matter up with the board.

The bookshop, located at 916 7th st. nw., has been listed by Attorney General Clark as a "Communist front." This description, Mrs. Minowitz said yesterday, was wrong but she would be unable to give testimony backing up her opinion because she didn't know "who is a Communist and who is not."

Speaking in a voice so low that it barely carried back to the first row of spectators' chairs, Mrs. Minowitz refused on grounds of possible self-incrimination, to say whether she was or was not a Communist. When Representative Velde (R., Ill.) asked why, unless she thought Community Party membership was a crime, she declined to answer, Mrs. Minowitz again refused to reply on the same grounds.

Miss Miller, a naturalized citizen who came from England by way of Switzerland, said she had never held membership in the Communist Party. She was, she declared, "not a member of any party."

Under questioning, Mrs. Minowitz identified herself as proprietor of the Superior Print Shop which, under her late husband's management in 1944, printed the USSR Information Bulletin. She testified also that she was a shareholder in Radio Station WQQW, having inherited the stock from her husband.

Later yesterday the committee announced it would consider today whether to bring perjury charges against Toma Babin, former official of the Yugoslav Consulate in New York. Committee Counsel Frank Tavenner recommended prosecution of Babin after he denied at a closed hearing last May that he had attended a meeting of Communist officials at the Hotel Lincoln in New York, June 21, 1947.

Before yesterday's hearings were begun, Arthur W. Fry, a Veterans' Administration handwriting expert, testified that "purported known handwriting" of Babin was the same as that in which the name T. Babin was signed on the Hotel Lincoln register for June 21, 1947.

Burning Fat Starts Chain of Accidents

Felthman, England, July 6 (U.P.).—Mrs. Olive Rochler, frightened when her frying fat caught fire in her fish and chip shop here yesterday, ran into the street and was run down by a car.

Mrs. A. Buzzy saw the accident, fainted, and was taken home in an ambulance.

Atomic Power Seen in Use Soon

ministration, one can hardly say results are not relevant."

Many of the criticisms raised by Hickenlooper, Lilienthal indicated, have little to do with the commission's main purpose of giving the United States atomic supremacy in a world embroiled in a cold war.

Any errors that were made—and Lilienthal conceded there were some—were made because this country had to give priority to atomic weapon production after Russia refused to agree to a system of international control.

U. S. Found "Unarmed"

When the Atomic Energy Commission took over from the Army in 1947, Lilienthal said, it found the United States "virtually unarmed atomically."

Bacher supported Lilienthal's account of how the A-bomb stockpile was built up practically from scratch. Without blaming the Army in any way, he said he was "deeply shocked to find out how few atomic weapons we had" immediately after the war.

He went into detail on a multimillion dollar atomic reactor program now getting underway, stating that it holds great promise not only of atomic engines to propel ships and submarines but development of power for peaceful purposes.

"If we are not timid in going ahead with this work," he said, "major successes will come to us. If we are timid or are unnecessarily delayed, we will suffer major setbacks. It calls for bold steps."

"I believe we have taken great steps forward."

He said for example that the Eniwetok tests in the Pacific gave science more information about how atomic bombs work and what can be expected of them in the future than they ever had before.

He added that they already have led to improvements in design and production of the A-bomb and "give us great hope for future development."

Big Possibilities

Questioned about possible public benefits, Bacher said it is "always difficult" to say what a new invention will lead to. He recalled that when the steam engine was invented, no one could comprehend the role it would play.

"Many sections of this vast Nation now are uninhabited because of the absence of water and power," he said. "Atomic energy will not solve all, but it decidedly will lift such limitations of the past such as proximity to coal and oil."

He said atomic scientists already have learned a "great deal" about the use of liquid metals for cooling purposes in atomic reactors and that several new and unusual metals have been developed.

"This is a major step in the production of power," the physicist said. "We are getting to the point where this might be feasible."

He said atomic energy, presumably because of the high temperatures it develops, may make it possible to use low-grade ores which now are next to worthless. He also disclosed that more plutonium, explosive core of the A-bomb, now can be produed from a given amount of raw uranium.

Stands By Policy.

Lilenthal stuck by his policy of dealing with the accomplishments of the atomic program—not its shortcomings. He said that when the program came under civilian control, this country did not have the amount or kind of atomic weapons necessary to remain ahead in the atomic energy race.

"We believed as one man—and as did the President, our immediate superior—that we should let nothing stand in the way of arming this Nation atomically as a deterrent to aggression in the world," he said.

"It meant production should be drastically stepped up. Our move had to be toward a nation that held a leadership unquestioned."

That determination, he said, was forfeited by Russia's persistent refusal in the United Nations to agree to some kind of effective international control of the atom.

"Right or wrong, we concentrated on that and we refused to be distracted by countless things that in normal times we would have given attention to."

He said the commission deliberately flouted the "bureaucratic rule: 'Don't take a chance, don't stick your neck out'."

NEA Favors Barring Reds As Teachers

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Boston, July 6.—The National Education Association's committee on tenure and academic freedom declared flatly today that it will not fight for the jobs of Communists dismissed from teaching posts.

Martin W. Essex, Lakewood, Ohio, committee chairman, made the statement at the twenty-eighth annual meeing of the NEA after the 3000 delegates, representing 825,000 teachers, voted that Communists should be banned from teaching. The resolution passed with a great chorus of "ayes" and only a few scattered contrary votes.

The delegates vigorously applauded John K. Norton of Columbia Teachers College, author of the statement, who posed this question:

"Should there be freedom to destroy our freedom and by using the school as a means of doing it?"

The committee on tenure and academic freedom agreed to investigate cases of dismissal when communism only was alleged. Essex said local boards of education and school superintendents can rid schools of Communist teachers without opposition of the committee.

Only the sections of the educational policies commission report dealing with communism were brought before the assembly today. The full report was received by the assembly for further study.

A retired school teacher, 76-year-old Mrs. Johanna M. Lindlof of New York City, kept the entire report from reaching the assembly floor, declaring it needed careful study.

Before the vote the delegates repeatedly were told the entire country was looking to the teachers to take a forceful stand. The statements were made by Norton and American Legion Commander Perry Brown.

Only opposition was raised by Mrs. Rose Russell of the New York CIO Teachers Union.

Mrs. Russell said she did not oppose the firing of Communist teachers, but objected to "opening the door to dismissals on political grounds."

"You are going to intimidate a large number of teachers,' she said. "You are going to give a weapon to school officials who will use the subterfuge of disloyalty to fire teachers who fight for better schools."

Brown reiterated the Legion's stand favoring Federal aid to education but told the teachers that if they received Federal funds they should take over some of the tasks of training youth for National defense.

Schools, he said, could teach prospective soldiers to run lathes, repair trucks or keep books. He also proposed that teachers who served in the armed forces be used to give basic military training to young men during summer months following graduation from high school.

'Tokyo Rose' Tried to Break GI Morale, U. S. Charges

San Francisco, July 6 (U.P.).—The Government opened its treason case against Mrs. Iva Toguri d'Aquino, "Tokyo Rose," today by accusing her of trying wilfully to stir up "nostaglia, homesickness and war-weariness" in American GIs in the Pacific.

'The Government evidence will show that she was under no duress, no compulsion," Chief Prosecutor Thomas De Wolfe said.

Her broadcasts "had the specific purpose of lowering morale of American troops," he said.

Bridges Refused Bond to Attend World Labor Talk

San Francisco, July 6 (AP).—Harry Bridges today failed in his efforts to leave the United States under bond and attend a world-wide maritime conference in France.

Bridges had been named by the CIO Longshoremen's Union, which he heads, and by the CIO Marine Cooks and Stewards, as their representative to the World Federation of Trade Unions conference at Marseilles.

The longshoremen's leader is under Federal indictment here, accused of perjury and conspiracy in obtaining citizenship papers in 1945. He is at liberty under a $5000 bond pending trial.

The union offered to post $100,000 bail to guarantee that Bridges would be here for his trial. Federal Judge Michasel J. Roche rejected the idea.

House Votes for Coinage Of Gold Barkley Medal

The House voted yesterday for coinage of a gold medal "in recognition of the distinguished service of Vice President Alben W. Barkley."

The Government would keep the medal, but would sell bronze duplicates to the public.

The measure authorizes an appropriation of $2500 and directs that the Treasury Department determine a suitable design and inscription for the medal. The bill now goes to the Senate.

Tension in Slovakia Reported Mounting

Russia Defied

Labor Fights Red Demands In Romania

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, July 6 (AP). The Communist newspaper, Borba, declared today discontent, strikes and sabotage have developed in Romania as a result of Russian removal of oil and other products from that nation.

Borba declared the Soviet Union is appropriating Romanian raw materials. Four fifths of the oil from Romanian wells is being removed to Russia as reparations, or as property of the Soviet-controlled corporation Sov Petrol, the paper said.

The newspaper did not quote the source of its information.

Borba is the voice of Premier Marshal Tito's Yugoslav government. The article was another blast in exchanges between Yugoslavia and her Communist neighbors—Romania among them—since they fell out a year ago.

The charges refleted Yugoslav indignation over similar economic tactics in Yugoslavia before the break between Belgrade and Moscow.

Borba reported widespread unemployment in Romania.

Saboteurs were declared to have damaged Romania's industry heavily. Borba cited two instances, a dockside fire in Constanza two months ago, reported to have destroyed "great quantities" of goods designed for export, and an explosion at the Argus Oil Co.

Prague, Czechoslovakia, July 6 (AP).—The people of strongly Catholic Slovakia are under such close watch by their Communist rulers that even some Communist Party members complain their mail is censored and their telephones tapped.

These reports were brought back today by reporters who visited Bratislava, capital and largest city of Slovakia, over the long weekend of religious holidays.

They said the atmosphere in Slovakia is more tense since the church-state troubles there last week when, according to the controlled press, rioting occurred between Communist police and Catholic faithful who were trying to defend their village priests from arrest.

These troubles were reported to have been scattered and sporadic. The situation now is believed to be quiet, on the surface, but authorities are increasingly watchful.

These were the reports brought back by newsmen:

In Bratislava, Catholic churches were packed for the weekend services and church collections, which the Communists tried to stop in some sections of the country, were still being taken up.

Many people were afraid to talk about the church-state strife to strangers.

Reporters observed that although the religious, folklore and harvest festivals of the weekend were heavily attended, the applause came almost entirely from small, organized cheering sections stationed near the micorphones which broadcast the government officials' speeches to the nation.

Reds Assign Chief to Talks

Berlin, July 6 (AP).—The Russians have assigned their biggest policy man in Germany, Vladimer Semionov, to the problem of reviving trade between east and west Germany.

Semionov holds the rank of ambassador as well as chief political adviser. He will represent the Soviet Union in trade and transport talks with economic advisers of the western powers, likely to start next week.

The committee was established by order of the Big Four military governors yesterday. The West will be represented by Lawrence F. Wilkinson, believed Russia Sir Cecil Weir of Britain and Paul Leroy-Beaulieu of France.

Wilkinson, believed Russia, needs an over-all policy man such as Semionov to discuss more than one subject.

West Objects To Red Plan on Austrian Debt

London, July 6 (AP).—The West objected today to Russian terms for settling Austria's war debt to the Soviet Union.

Russia's Georgi N. Zarubin asked at a meeting of Big Four deputy foreign ministers that Austria be bound to pay Russia 150 million dollars in quarterly instalments of $6,250,000 over six years. He also asked security in the form of promissory notes to be issued to the Bank of Russia by the Austrian National Bank. He wanted payment in United States dollars at their gold parity value on September 1, 1949.

Samuel Reber, the American deputy, opposed the first two of Zarubin's demands. Backed by the British and French deputies, he said quarterly payments would impose too great a strain on Austria's already burdened economy.

Zarubin, replying to Reber, said Austria was getting something in return for the 150-million-dollar settlement—that was all the one-time German assets, properties and war booty now held by the Soviets. Russia could not hand these things over to Austria and then wait at least one year for the first instalment of the compensation, as Reber suggested, Zarubin said.

Belgian Asks New Cabinet

Brussels, Belgium, July 6 (U.P.)—Prince Regent Charles today asked Ranz van Cauwelaert, former Catholic president of the House of Representatives, to try to form a coalition government which can agree on the future of exiled King Leopold III.

The 69-year-old van Cauwelaert was named "informant," a post tantamount to Premier-designate.

Van Cauwelaert at once began discussions with Socialist and Liberal Party leaders. Reliable sources said he also conferred with former Socialist Premier Paul-Henri Spaak before accepting the post.

If Van Cauwelaert cannot form a government, Prince Charles may have to dissolve Parliament, chosen less than two weeks ago, and order a new election.

Ex-Premier Paul van Zeeland of the Social Christian (Catholic) Party gave up yesterday after he had tried for a week to form a coalition government with either the Liberals (conservatives) or Socialists, which oppose Leopold's return from Switzerland.

John Hay Whitney Gets Post on Board of NPA

The National Planning Association yesterday announced the election of John Hay Whitney, New York financier, to its board of trustees.

Whitney becomes the thirty-sixth member of the board. It is made up of leaders in industry, labor, agriculture and the professions, and is devoted to planning in the economic and social fields.

Indonesian Head Returns From Exile

Jogjakarta, Java, July 6 (AP).—President Soekarno of the Indonesian Republic came home from exile today. Cheers mixed with rumblings of possible new uprisings against the Dutch.

The cheers came from throngs of ragged, flag-waving Republicans lining the last lap of the president's route to this capital from Bangka Island, where the Dutch had held him since last December.

The rumblings came at flag-hoisting ceremonies following the arrival of Soekarno, Premier Mohammed Hatta and five other formerly exiled government leaders at the presidential palace.

A spokesman for the Republican parliaments working committee referred bitterly to the Dutch in a welcoming speech. He called for unity of various Republican groups in a continuing struggle against "this one and common enemy."

The Dutch seized the Republican leaders during their "police action" last year in Republican territory.

Anna Roosevelt Plans Cross-Bill In Divorce Suit

Los Angeles, July 6 (AP).—Anna Roosevelt Boettiger will file a cross-complaint for divorce charging John Boettiger deserted her, her attorney, J. G. Moser, said today.

The complaint will be filed, Moser said, within a day or two in Phoenix where Boettiger yesterday filed a divorce suit charging former President Roosevelt's daughter with extreme mental cruelty.

Mrs. Boettiger also will file a general denial of all her husband's allegations, the attorney said. The charges included one that she humiliated him repeatedly and continually.

Mrs. Boettiger commented today: "I hate to talk about it. The fact that we've been having trouble in the family is no news."

Death of Jap Railways Head Brings Unrest

Tokyo, July 6 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters and the Japanese government called urgent top-level conferences today as unrest mounted following the decapitation of Sadanori Shimoyama, head of the state-owned railroads.

Japanese police reported they were "just about" convinced Shimoyama had been murdered, presumably in an effort to halt the projected discharge of 90,000 railway workers.

Police would not rule out the possibility he committed suicide in despair over being forced to carry out the unpopular measure. The mass firing was ordered by MacArthur's headquarters to help Japan balance the budget.

Allied observers said Shimoyama's death and the resultant unrest here presented MacArthur's headquarters with its most serious challenge to date.

Officials admitted the firings were creating "unrest," but said the government would not declare a state of emergency immediately. The cabinet is considering a "shoot to kill" order for police attacked by rioters.

Shimoyama disappeared on his way to work yesterday. Police believed he was kidnaped, killed and placed on the spot where a train ran over him.

County Residents Reminded of Ban On Garden Hose

Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties residents were reminded yesterday that they cannot use hoses to water their lawns.

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission and the Montgomery County Police both issued the reminders. The commission warned June 15 that watering with hoses could not be permitted because of the need to conserve water through the heat wave.

Deputy Chief Engineer Harry Shaw said the hot weather has not seriously curtailed the water supply, but that the measure is necessary to protect against shortage.

The $400,000 fire in Silver Spring Monday consumed more than two million gallons of water, of which 1,500,000 gallons were taken from the Washington system through the Silver Spring booster pumping station.

Chinese Red Chief Asserts Russian Tie

Moscow, July 6 (U.P.).—Mao Tze-tung, Chinese Communist leader, said today in a full page article in Pravda that "we belong in the anti-imperialist front led by the Soviet Union, and we can hope for genuine friendly aid from this front and not the imperialist front."

Points in the article included:

1. The Chinese Communists want an alliance with Russia and countries of "new democracy" in Europe, and an alliance with the proletariat of other countries for an international united front.

2. China must choose between socialism and imperialism, because there is no middle course, and has chosen the side of Russia as the only country which treats China like an equal.

3. China needs foreign trade, and will try to get it by establishing diplomatic and commercial relations with all powers on a basis of equality, mutual advantage and mutual respect for territorial integrity.

House Moves to Stop Truman From Making Any Drastic Changes in War Establishment

By C. B. Allen
NYHT News Service

The House Armed Services Committee moved yesterday to forestall possible drastic changes by President Truman in the National Military Establishment under his new powers to reorganize Government departments.

It did this by tentatively approving a proposed Unification Act amendment prohibiting the establishment of a "military dictatorship" through creation of a single chief of staff for the Army, Navy and Air Force, and banning an "armed forces general staff" under his control. At the same time the committee indicated its approval of increased powers for the Secretary of Defense but with restrictions that would make it impossible for him to effect an outright merger of the three services.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) served blunt warning on his associates that "if we don't do something about reorganizing the present military setup, somebody else will." He drew from Defense Secretary Louis A. Johnson the admission that the Reorganization Act, passed 10 days ago, could be used to bypass Congress if it continues to dally on a Senate-approved bill to clarify and strengthen the Unification Law of 1947.

"I think I can say, without being disloyal to the President," Secretary Johnson added, "that I would prefer Congress to take prompt and definite action on this matter." Representative Vinson interjected that if the amendments proposed by him to the bill passed by the Senate on May 26 were approved, the national defense system would "stay reorganized at least four years."

One member of the committee said privately that the Senate bill, originally requested by Mr. Truman in a special message to Congress, had languished in the House committee for more than a month and "might be pigeonholed yet if the Reorganization Act hadn't been passed." The latter development, he added, had brought the realization that the President might at any time "pull the rug out from under the Armed Servies Committees of both the House and the Senate" by effecting a shakeup of his own in the Military Establishment.

Secretary Johnson, who was questioned by the committee for nearly three hours and is to appear before it again today, said he was opposed to a single chief of staff, agreeing on this score with the views expressed last week by former President Herbert Hoover. He added that the Secretary of Defense needed the additional powers to discharge his responsibilities effectively.

This was challenged sharply by Representative F. Edward Hebert (D., La.), who said "unless you can show me otherwise, I am inclined to think the power you already have ought to be curbed."

Vandenberg Appeals for Pact

was a round of applause when he finished, and a line formed to shake his hand.

Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), complimented him on a "beautiful speech."

Lucas asked Vandenberg, "What would happen" if the Senate refused to ratify the pact?

Vandenberg said he was not sure what would happen but of one thing he was convinced: "It would end the momentum of peace in a cold war we are now winning."

Lucas quoted Vandenberg's description of the treaty as "the most practical deterrent and discouragement to war which the wit of man has yet devised."

Reverse Would Be True

The Democratic leader said his own opinion was that the reverse would be true if the Senate failed to ratify.

"It would be an open invitation for an aggressor to go to war," said Lucas.

Throughout his nearly two-hour speech the Michigan Republican referred to the resolution he shepherded through the Senate a year ago by a vote of 64 to 4. Calling for ollective self-defense and in the same breath for universal disarmament, Vandenberg said it was the "clear forerunner of this pact."

"Let that stand as an incontestable answer to those malignant critics who cry out that the North Atlantic pact is born of war mongers harboring evil, armed designs upon their fellow men," he said.

It was here he proposed that Mr. Truman follow up the Senate's action with a new crusade for peace.

"I could wish," he said, "that if and when this pact is ratified, the President of the United States might address the world on this score . . . and that he might call the peoples of the earth to a new crusade in behalf of these peace truths in the so-called Vandenberg resolution.

"Tops in Pacifism"

"I could wish that he might underscore our good faith dedication to disarmament and plead for good faith recruits."

Commending the treaty as "tops in practical pacifism" for Western civilization in general and for this country in particular, he told the Senate it "makes" the United Nations Charter work.

He said its power for peace lies in the "awesome fact that any aggressor upon the North Atlantic community knows in advance that from the very moment he launches his conquest he will forthwith face whatever cumulative opposition these united allies deem necessary to beat him to his knees and to restore peace and security."

It is aimed at nothing but aggression and no one but armed aggressors, he said.

"No nation on this earth need lose so much as one night's sleep over its purpose or its ultimate impact unless that nation plans voluntarily to identify itself as an international criminal by armed aggression against its peace-loving neighbors," he told the Senate. "But if such there be, here is a warrant for its doom."

French Parliament Unit Approves Pact, 20 to 13

Paris, July 6 (AP).—The Foreign Affairs Committee of the French Parliament approved the North Atlantic Pact today by 20 votes to 13. The negative votes were cast by Communists and affiliated groups.

to defense questioning of the precinct officers. Each was asked who discovered the bogus votes and to whom the discovery was reported. In most cases, the finder was a Republican.

When the votes were found on election day, several Democrats in the county issued a statement charging the votes were planted to void the outcome of voting in heavily Democratic precincts.

Prichard and Funk are Democrats. Prichard is a former Government aide in Washington. The bogus ballots were marked for Democratic candidates except one which was scratched for John Sherman Cooper, Republican candidate for reelection as United States Senator. He was beaten by Democratic United States Senator Virgil Chapman, a resident of Bourbon County.

Arctic Circle Swelters As Mercury Reaches 50

Spitzbergen, July 6 (U.P.).—There's even a heat wave in the Arctic Circle.

Sheriff Haakon Balstad, opening the first telephone connection between this Norwegian polar dependency and the mainland, said today:

"What we need up here right new are refrigerators. We've had difficulty the past few weeks keeping food fresh because of the heat wave. Why, the temperature has even been up to 50 degrees."

Car Aid for Veterans Liberalized by Senate

The Senate yesterday passed and sent to the House a bill liberalizing the law providing for free cars for disabled veterans.

The law now states that a $1600 car shall be donated by the Veterans Administration to each veteran who has lost the use of one or both legs at or above the ankle.

Carpenters' Strike Held A 'Lockout'

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The 36-day work stoppage in the area construction industry, initiated by a walkout of carpenters and building laborers, is no longer a strike but a lockout, the Washington Building Trades Council (AFL) declared yesterday.

The executive board of the council, representing 19 AFL building crafts, formally made the lockout charge at a meeting a few hours after leaders of the Master Builders Association and Construction Contractors Council agreed to stand firmly behind their negotiating committee.

Negotiators for the builders and subcontractors have been seeking to obtain contracts with four non-striking AFL unions whose old work agreements have expired. With these out of the way, the builders' representatives feel, the dispute with the carpenters and laborers can be quickly cleaned up.

Thus, while trying to line up new agreements with the AFL truck drivers, rodmen, ironworkers and cement finishers, the employers have had few if any negotiations with the striking carpenters and building laborers.

This action, the Building Trades Council declared yesterday, is tantamount to a "lockout." The Council informed the Master Builders Association and the Construction Contractors Council that unless management immediately renewed direct talks with the strikers, all other AFL unions would be asked to cut off negotiations until the walkout is settled.

The employers' approach in seeking agreements simultaneously with four unions smacks of an attempt at industry-wide bargaining, for which neither side is adequately prepared, according to Frank O'Conner, executive secretary, of the Building Trades Council. He urged that the negotiators for the builders and contractors get down to finding a peace formula for the carpenters and building laborers first, before seeking other settlements.

London, July 6 (AP).—British troops were ordered tonight to be ready to begin unloading food ships along London's strike-bound waterfront Thursday morning.

The number of soldiers to be used was not announced.

More than 100 ships, of which more than half carry food, are tied up by a stevedore strike. The men quit work two weeks ago, refusing to unload two Canadian freighters involved in a strike of Canadian seamen. The British strikers are officially reported to number 8577.

Labor Minister George Isaacs told Parliament the government had decided to use troops for dock work as a means of "safeguarding food supplies." He said the troops would unload only the food ships.

Boycott Threat Report Called 'Premature'

New York, July 6 (AP).—The Maritime Trades Council of New York (AFL) said today that announcement of a threatened boycott of all British ships in eastern United States ports was "premature."

The council added, however, there may be an eventual boycott.

Earlier, Hal C. Banks, international representative of the Seafarers International Union, had said in Montreal the boycott would begin at midnight tonight. An estimated 120 British vessels would have been affected.

The SIU is a member of the council.

Banks had said the boycott would be in reprisal for the refusal of British dockers to work SIU-manned Canadian ships. Support of the Maritime Trades Council would be necessary to make the boycott effective.

The council is made up of AFL seagoing and dock workers.

No Pay Raise, Says Big Steel which covered the three union demands this way:

1. Wages: "We are convinced that no sound reasons justify an increase this time. A period of slackening business activity throughout the country is certainly no time to increase costs of production through the imposition of higher employment costs . . . " The average basic hourly pay now is about $1.69.

2. Pensions: "We propose that this issue of whether or not the contract can now be reopened by the union on this subject be presented . . . to the board of conciliation and arbitration for decision." The corporation has insisted only rates of pay and insurance could be discussed this year.

3. Insurance: "The companies (six United States Steel subsidiaries) continue willing to arrange . . . for insurance benefits . . . but only on the express understanding that the cost of such insurance shall be divided equally between the companies and the participating employes."

President Philip Murray of both the CIO and the Steelworkers told a news conference:

"The conferences are deadlocked. There is no hope, as I see it at the present moment, of a mutually satisfactory agreement being reached on any of the issues. I do not know when the conferences will reconvene. They were recessed subject to the call of the chairman (John A. Stephens, vice president of Big Steel, was named joint chairman of the bargaining sessions)."

Decision Due July 13

Murray said a report would be given the union's potent wage-policy committee at the July 13 meeting in Pittsburgh, where a decision would be made "as to the future course of action."

A strike by the 170,000 union members employed by U. S. Steel probably would be joined by the union's entire 850,000 membership, since other steel producers usually follow U. S. Steel Corp.'s lead in dealing with the USW.

The last Nation-wide steel strike occurred in 1946. It lasted for two months and ended with the steelworkers winning a 19-cent hourly wage increase.

Housing Bill Passage Nears

ations Committee could veto such funds, but the conferees felt it unwise to allow any one committee to have such sweeping power.

The Senate conferees accepted a House provision extending for 60 days the already-existing Government financial aids for private home builders under Titles I, II and VI of the Housing Act. The provisions were made retroactive to June 30, date of expiration of the present authority.

Under this provision, the Federal Housing Administration would be authorized to continue through August its program of insuring mortgages on multiple dwelling units up to 90 per cent of their cost. An additional 500 million dollars would be made available to handle the mortgage insurance program.

The FHA loan powers lapsed June 30. The temporary extension is aimed at giving Congress time to review the whole program.

Priority Eliminated

The conferees eliminated a House provision which called for specific priority in public housing projects for persons who are moved out of slums. Senator John Sparkman (D., Ala.), one of the conferees, said this provision was contained in the bill in other language.

The conferees, however, wrote in a provision which said that within a five-year period construction of new public housing units must be made to balance out elimination of existing slum dwellings.

The conferees retained a provision stipulating that none of the housing funds could be used to pay salaries of Government employes found to have associations with organizations listed as subversive.

Rent Controls Are Ordered Off Luxury Housing

Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods yesterday ordered rent controls removed from "luxury" housing where landlords remodel the buildings to provide additional rental units.

Woods pointed out that the 1949 rent control law does not define luxury housing accommodations but he interpreted the law to mean unfurnished accommodations renting for more than $290 a month or any lower figure that the area rent director thinks is "representative of rentals for luxury housing accommodations in his defense-rental area."

He said each landlord must file a decontrol petition and then show he intends to convert his building to provide more housing.

Bookie on Raft Is Arrested in Flooded Cellar

Chicago, July 6 (U.P.). — Police raided a flooded basement today and arrested a handbook operator taking bets while seated on a raft.

Police Capt. Thomas Alcock said Arthur Olsen, 33, was "paddling furiously" between three telephones, taking bets on the horses.

Alcock and two detectives raided the place after getting a tip that a handbook was operating in a tavern basement. With a crowbar they pried open a trapdoor in the tavern above and dropped into 4 feet of water.

Olsen, hustled to the police station, said the basement was flooded by last night's rains. He said he made the raft himself.

Pope Urges Alliance Against Materialism

Rome, July 6 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XII declared today it is "necessary and urgent" for nations opposed to materialism to form a spiritual alliance in order "to stem the tide of materialism."

The Pope, whose words had special significance in view of the church-state struggle nearing its climax in Czechoslovakia, spoke at a credential-presentation ceremony for the first Indian Minister to the Vatican, Dhirajlal Phulbhai Desai.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Man, 60, Found Dead in Hotel; Note Is Left

A 60-year-old man was found dead in his third-floor room at the Continental Hotel, N. Capitol and D sts., at 3 p.m. yesterday with an empty sleeping pill container and a note with instructions for his burial near his body.

The man, Thomas A. Sims, had moved into the hotel two days ago, hotel attendants said. Police said he had left all his belongings in a rooming house at 2634 Garfield st. nw., where he had been living for the past several weeks.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said Sims had apparently died of an overdose of sleeping tablets but withheld a death certificate pending an autopsy today.

Miss Mary Anderson, daughter of the landlady at the Garfield st. address, said Sims apparently did not have a job, although his rent was paid and he had appeared "very cheerful" recently.

She said he had been living there for several weeks and had not indicated any intention of moving. Police said the dead man's only known survivor is a brother, E. M. Sims of Elkhart, Ind.

9 Arlington Businessmen Face Tax Suits

Summonses were prepared yesterday for service on nine Arlington businessmen who allegedly have failed to pay Virginia State licenses taxes.

The cases will be called at 11 a. m. Tuesday in Arlington County Court, according to Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Paul D. Brown.

Deadline for payment of the State license tax was January 31. Tax delinquents can be punished by fines ranging from $5 to $1000, Brown said.

At the same time, the Commonwealth's Attorney's office was studying a list of "about 200" Arlington businessmen who have not paid the new Arlington County license tax.

Brown said the list would be pared to exclude those not liable to the local tax. Summonses will be issued later on the delinquents for a court appearance.

The Arlington business and professional license levy was passed by the County Board last February. The first tax payments were due by March 31. The board specified a 5 per cent penalty for tardiness, and a maximum penalty of $300 and 30 days in jail for intentional tax evasion.

Inter-American Aid Extension Passed by Senate

The Senate yesterday passed and sent to the House legislation extending the life of the Institute of Inter-American Affairs for five years.

The bill also authorizes the institute to spend not more than 25 million dollars during the period on cooperative programs in education, public health and technical fields.

The General Accounting Office meantime urged the House Foreign Affairs Committee to place tighter controls on the institute's spending. It reported its auditors had found 17 instances of "mistakes" and "bad judgment" in its handling of Federal funds.

W. L. Ellis, a GAO official, recommended the accounting office be given authority to check on institute spending at regular intervals.

Berry 'Ruled' Union Alone, House Is Told

By The Associated Press

J. H. de La Rosa said yesterday the late George Berry ran the International Pressmen's Union (AFL) with an "iron hand." He suggested that protests—even from other officers—were useless.

A House Labor Subcommittee qustioned De La Rosa, who succeeded Berry as Pressmen's president, on union practices under Berry.

Chairman Jacobs (D., Ind.) asked if De La Rosa did not think it "strange" Berry failed to call the union's board of directors together during his regime of many years.

De La Rosa said it hadn't occurred to him "because we were too busy." Then he added:

"The way Mr. Berry conducted the international union with an iron hand—what was the use of protesting?"

Funds Held From Estate

Present union officers contend that Berry took some $25,000 from the union treasury in 1948 to settle back income taxes.

A union convention later approved Berry's use of the funds, but officials contend the convention delegates were under the impression they were approving payment of only $2500. The union presently is withholding some funds from Berry's estate as a result of the allegations.

Jacobs introduced incomplete copies of union tax informations showing $25,000 had been paid in attorneys' fees to unidentified recipients. These informations, stating the amount and name of the recipient, are furnished the Treasury Department for cross-checking income-tax returns.

Jacobs said he wanted to know the names of the attorneys who got the money.

"You certainly see how this is a device for syphoning funds out of the union," he observed.

George Googe, union vice president, suggested the committee and the union attorney might try to find out what happened.

"Don't worry," Jacobs retorted, "I intend to find out by myself."

Googe told the committee he was on the union convention resolutions committee which drew up the resolution approving Berry's action in taking funds from the treasury, but that it mentioned only per diem traveling expenses.

"Do you know that Mr. Berry drew his per diem every day, whether he was traveling or not, and not only that but that he did not pay his expenses out of the per diem but billed the international?" asked Jacobs.

Googe indicated he had not known it.

"As a matter of fact," continued Jacobs, "didn't you know that Mr. Berry just ran the union as he saw fit?"

"I knew he ran the union, and other officers cooperated with his policies," answered Googe.

2 Quizzed in Fire, Theft at Restaurant

Police last night were questioning two suspects in the $17,000 fire and $2100 theft which occurred late Tuesday at the Texas Grill, 1361 H st. ne.

The fire, discovered about 11 p. m., gutted second-floor offices and the apartment of the grill proprietor, Richard R. Baker, before it was quelled.

Baker said he returned from a weekend vacation yesterday at 7 a. m. In investigating the fire damage he said he discovered a small tin box containing $2100 in cash had been stolen from a filing cabinet.

He said the cabinet had been removed from the second-floor offices to the basement, where it was forced open.

Fire investigators said they found three 5 and 10-gallon milk cans containing an inflammable cleaning fluid which apparently had been poured over the second floor and also the basement to start the fire. The grill, Baker said, used no cleaning fluid and had none on the premises.

Also, peanut oil, used by the grill, which delivers hot food, particularly fried chicken, had been poured over stock—paper boxes, napkins, plates and cooking equipment, firemen said. Some 75 gallons of the oil had been on the premises before the fire.

A separate fire had been started in the basement but was doused by firemen after it had only burned a door. Damage to stock was estimated by the fire marshal's office at $10,000 and the damage to the two-story brick building at $7000.

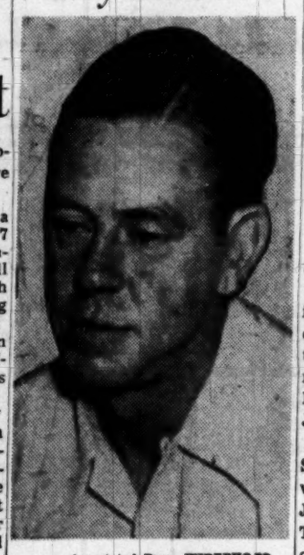
Ex-Convict Admits Valley Murders



Associated Press WIREPHOTO
HENRY BRUN GULDBRANDSEN,

34-year-old merchant mariner and former convict, signed a statement in Eureka, Calif., admitting the Fourth of July bludgeon slayings of two men in a cabin overlooking the Valley of the Moon. He gave himself up to a cub newspaper reporter. He denied he had raped Mrs. Eva Paget, 27, mother of two, who is in a critical condition in Sonoma Hospital from the attack and a beating

Mining Stock Deals Indict Alexandrian

A man who allegedly bandied big names and spoke in terms of six figures, was charged in an indictment yesterday in District Court with false pretenses in getting $2500 here in mining stock deals.

He is Raymond P. Smith, listed on court papers as residing at 1106 N. Pitt st., Alexandria. The indictment against him is in four counts. The complainants who say they gave him $1250 each were named as Phillips Moore, Holmes Run rd., Falls Church, Va., and James P. Cockey, 4400 18th st. nw.

According to the information, Smith represented to his alleged victims that his customers included John R. Steelman and Edward A. Tamm, then a Justice Department official and now a judge of District Court. Smith also said he was working on a deal with Leon Henderson, according to the statements. The stock involved was that of Silver Crescent, Inc.

Talked of Partnership

According to the indictment, Smith claimed he had formed a partnership with two officers of the company and that 359,000 shares had been deposited in a Spokane, Wash., bank.

Smith's indictment was among 40 returned by the District grand jury. A total of 39 defendants were named in the 40 indictments.

Also charged with false pretense was Claude R. Wallace, a used-car dealer here, living in West Lanham Hills, Md. He is charged with falsely pretending to own two used-car lots here and having a total of $75,000 in the bank in obtaining two automobiles totally valued at $3450. He gave unsecured personal notes for the vehicles, the indictment said.

John N. Burckhead, 43, of 7408 Stratford rd., Bethesda, Md., was indicted on charges of abstracting more than $1400 and making false entries of more than $5000 while he was assistant cashier of the National Capital Bank of Washington.

In charge of small loans, he listed mythical borrowers and kept the money he said he lent, according to court papers.

Louis P. Mastriana, 30, no fixed address, was indicted on charges of passing more than $3250 in bad checks here.

Murder of Neighbor Charged

Andy Bryson, 50, of 2425 K st. nw., was charged with the first-degree murder of his next-door neighbor, Charles W. Butler, 48, of 2423 K st. nw., on June 6. According to police, Bryson shot Butler in the chest with a pistol a week after Butler invited Bryson's wife to have breakfast with him.

Charged with second-degree murder was Ester Freeman, 23, of 427 L st. nw., who was indicted in the fatal shooting of William J. Smith, 25, of 1875 Savannah st. se., on June 10.

Odessa M. Madre, 41, of 1719 1st st. nw., was charged with peddling cocaine and heroin. Along with George W. Byers, 28, of 1919 6th st. nw., she also was charged with forging the indorsement on two $93.54 Government checks.

George P. Noble, 52, of 3166 17th st. nw., was charged with embezzling more than $10,000 from Mazo Bros., Inc., here, where he was a bookkeeper-cashier.

Search for 2 In Slaying Intensified

Montgomery County detectives yesterday intensified their search for two men with a suitcase, wanted for questioning in the murder of an 18-year-old sailor near Rockville, Md., Saturday.

Both a woman from Gaithersburg and a truck driver from Rockville told police yesterday they saw the two men, one of whom was wearing a maroon shirt, standing about 50 feet away from the sailor on Route 240 in Rockville about 1 a. m. Saturday. All three were hitch-hiking, the man and woman said.

The spot where the three were observed is only about a half block from Wood's lane, where an auto, later found bloodstained and half submerged on the Potomac River seawall, was stolen that same night. The blood in the car was the same type as the sailor's blood, police said.

A Public Buildings Administration guard told police Tuesday that he saw two men hurrying from the spot where the bloodstained car was found early Saturday. One of the men wore a maroon shirt and they were carrying a suitcase, he told police. Police are trying to locate a taxicab driver, believed to have picked up the two men near the spot at Rock Creek pkwy. and Constitution ave. where the car was half submerged.

The slain sailor was John J. Little, who was en route from the Naval Base at Oceana near Norfolk, Va., to his home in Loretta, Pa., on holiday leave.

His body was found lying near a beer tavern about 1½ miles north of Rockville about 9:30 a. m. Saturday. He is said to have died between midnight Friday and 2 a. m. Saturday. His wallet, containing about $50, was missing.

Silver Spring Hunts 'Hobo' After 2d Fire

A small fire yesterday in a dry cleaning establishment near the Silver Spring lumber yard and mill, which were destroyed by flames Monday, has started police on an intensive search for a "hobo" who may have set both fires.

Yesterday's blaze broke out in the Morningside Laundry & Dry Cleaning Co., at 8220 Georgia ave., about 9:30 a. m. The fire started at the bottom of some racks of clothes, kept in paper bags, and spread upward, burning a small hole in the ceiling.

The blaze was quickly extinguished with a small hose by the Silver Spring Fire Department, located across the street. Damage was placed at $500.

Employes of the dry cleaning establishment declared that not one of them had been near the racks of clothes when the fire started. They said, however, that shortly before the flames broke out, they observed a "burly" Negro, with a two or three-day growth of beard, loafing in the alley in the rear.

Montgomery County Police and Fire Department officials said he answered the same description of a man seen hurrying away from the direction of the lumber yard fire Monday afternoon. They said they believed he is one of the men who may frequent the railroad tracks in Silver Spring during warm weather.

A four-way probe is under way in the $400,000 fire which destroyed the lumber yard and mill of the nearby Silver Spring Building Supply Co., Inc.

Police say it is very possible that the fire was set by someone, since no inflammable materials or electrical wiring were kept in the mill shed, where the blaze is believed to have started.

Firemen pumped 2½ million gallons of water through 35,000 feet of hose before they brought the general alarm blaze under control.

Ex-Banker Gets 3 Years For Theft

New York, July 6 (AP).—Richard H. Crowe was sentenced to three years in prison today for stealing $883,660 from the National City Bank branch he served as assistant manager.

Crowe

Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard said he was giving full consideration to Crowe's cooperation in helping recover all but $5950.65 of the money.

Standing with bowed head, the banker said "I'm sorry I did it. It's something I did and I pleaded guilty to it."

He indicated he felt the sentence was too long, commenting "I don't see how I am going to pay back by sitting in prison."

But the judge told him:

"The public is entitled to be protected and the public is entitled to know that no one may violate the law and that all should be warned that they may not commit a crime."

Goddard also placed Crowe on probation for five years.

The defendant, with a salary of $7250 a year, had an 11-room home, was a member of many clubs and organizations, and owned two cars. He has a wife and three children.

Chief Assistant United States Attorney Irving H. Saypol said Crowe took the money "to liquidate his financial obligations."

Saypol said Crowe several years ago forged the name of an aunt to borrow some money. The aunt assumed the forgery-imposed debt, he said.

Crowe's parents have assumed their son's debts in connection with his bank theft and have been "impoverished by this incident," Saypol said.

Klan Names Demanded by Alabama Jury

Birmingham, Ala., July 6 (U.P.).—The special Jefferson County grand jury called the inner circle of the Ku Klux Klan before it today, amid reports that as many as 40 indictments may be returned in Alabama's hooded terrorist roundup.

Klan leaders were subpenaed to furnish "the name of every member of the Klan in Alabama." But if such rolls exist, Klan officials didn't take them to the grand jury.

"I don't know if the Klan has any records," said Dr. E. P. Pruitt, chairman of the board of governors of the Alabama KKK.

William Hugh Morris, Klan incorporator, and director, admitted he knew the whereabouts of Klan records, but said, "I don't think it's anybody's business."

"I'm not planning to produce the records," he said.

Man Wounded In Automobile, Woman Held

Mrs. Helen D. Welsh, 24, of 811 7th st. ne., was arrested yesterday, charged with shooting a 39-year-old Winchester, Va., man during a quarrel in his automobile.

Harrison T. Lunsford, in fair condition in Casualty Hospital with a gunshot wound in his right side, told Police Mrs. Welsh shot him late Tuesday night as they were returning to her house after a drive.

Lunsford said the quarrel was brought on by Mrs. Welsh's accusation that he was going out with other women. After the shot, he said, she dashed out of the car. Lunsford drove to a nearby gas station, called police and was taken to the hospital.

Mrs. Welsh was arrested several hours later when she returned home. In Municipal Court, the case was continued until July 22, with bail set at $1000.

Hearing Put Off On Scott Verdict

Roanoke, Va., July 6 (U.P.).—Judge Dirk A. Kuyk today postponed until Friday arguments to set aside the verdict sentencing choir boy Lee Goode Scott, 16, to 99 years in prison for the parish house murder of pretty Dana Marie Weaver, his high school classmate.

The arguments and possible formal sentencing of the husky Eagle Scout were scheduled today, but were postponed when his attorney, T. Warren Messick, was detained by a case in Federal District Court here.

Hunt Staged For Ravisher

Knoxville, Tenn., July 6 (U.P.).—A $1100 reward was offered today for the capture, dead or alive, of a phantom assailant who reportedly has raped at least 17 women, including five coeds at the University of Tennessee here.

The city council raised the reward money and increased police details in the section where the attacks have occurred over a period of months. The manhunt was kept quiet in its early stages.

Police Chief Joe Kimsey revealed that eight plain-clothes men have laid unsuccessful traps time and again for the phantom.

Vice Mayor Milton Roberts told the city council he has information that the man ravished at least 17 women, many of them prominent in the west Knoxville area. He said there may be other victims who have not reported to police.

New Montgomery Fire Code Goes Unopposed at Hearing

Montgomery County's proposed new fire code moved another step toward adoption yesterday when no serious opposition appeared at a public hearing held by the county council.

The 71-page code has been prepared by a 14-man committee headed by Albert E. Conradis, former county utilities agent, who presented the code to the council and explained its provisions.

The code provides for a fire marshal at a salary of $4800 a year. He will be in charge of enforcing the fire protection features of the proposed law.

The council took no action yesterday, but is expected to approve the code with few amendments and with little opposition prior to August 15, when it would become effective.

Only a few citizens appeared for the hearing, but this was explained by the fact most businessmen and others affected had previously conferred with committee members and are familiar with the provisions.

The code provides for administration, maintenance and operation of buildings; fire prevention regulations for buildings, inflammable materials and other hazardous materials; periodic inspections, fire drills, fire exits and other safety features for public institutions and halls; periodic flashing of a warning by motion picture theaters telling patrons to walk, not run, in case of fire.

Conradis reported the code has been approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, the National Lumber Manufacturing Association, the Maryland insurance commissioner, the Maryland Fire Underwriters Rating Bureau and the Washington Sanitary Commission.

HELP PREVENT TOOTH DECAY WITH THIS PROVEN DENTIFRICE THAT ALSO HAS A REFRESHING MINTY FLAVOR THE WHOLE FAMILY WILL ENJOY!

Colgate's Exclusive Foamy Cleaning Action Makes Teeth Look and Feel Cleaner Immediately!

You've read and heard about the astonishing new scientific discovery—the amazing formula that actually helps prevent tooth decay. Now you, too, can help cut down tooth decay—can save yourself untold pain, worry and expense—by regular use of this revolutionary dentifrice formula:

New COLGATE AMMONIATED TOOTH POWDER brings it to you—in a good-tasting, rich-foaming, mouth-refreshing dentifrice for which Colgate is world-famous.

Think of it! Simply by brushing teeth regularly as directed with this grand new COLGATE AMMONIATED TOOTH POWDER you can now help prevent tooth decay before it starts!

BOTH ADULTS AND CHILDREN NEED IT!

Using COLGATE AMMONIATED TOOTH POWDER actually gives you three benefits effective in reducing tooth decay for adults and children alike. Youngsters, especially, can avoid much grief and pain due to needless cavities. For records show greatest tooth decay damage occurs during growing years.

So don't delay. Start combating tooth decay now. Brush regularly as directed with COLGATE AMMONIATED TOOTH POWDER. You'll love its refreshing, minty flavor—leaves no metallic or chemical after-taste in your mouth. You'll like its rich, quick-foaming cleaning action. And notice the results! COLGATE AMMONIATED TOOTH POWDER helps remove film—makes teeth look cleaner, feel cleaner immediately! Sweetens breath, leaves mouth feeling fresher, too!

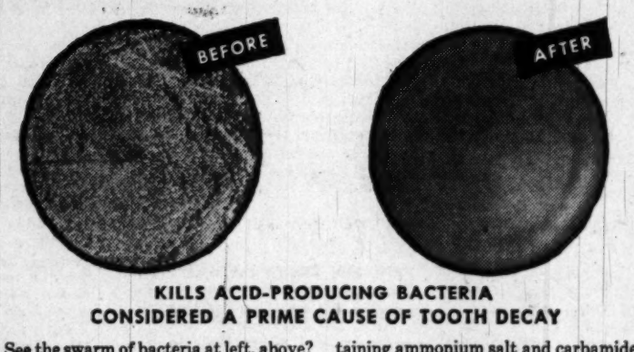
GUARANTEED BY COLGATE

Try COLGATE AMMONIATED TOOTH POWDER. If you do not agree it is the finest ammoniated dentifrice you ever used, we guarantee to refund your purchase price in full, plus postage. Just return the unused portion to Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., Jersey City 2, N. J.

Youngsters Love It—Colgate Ammoniated Tooth Powder foams freely, tastes so delightfully minty, refreshing. Leaves no metallic or chemical after-taste when left in mouth, as dentists advise, to prolong the protective action.

Dentists Themselves Use and recommend ammoniated dentifrices as an aid in controlling tooth decay. For cavities already formed, and to safeguard mouth health, be sure to visit your dentist regularly.

New Colgate Ammoniated Tooth Powder, brought to you from the research laboratories of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., is based on a formula developed by University of Illinois scientists. It contains the wonder-combination of Dibasic Ammonium Phosphate and Carbamide, you've read about in Time and Reader's Digest.



KILLS ACID-PRODUCING BACTERIA CONSIDERED A PRIME CAUSE OF TOOTH DECAY

See the swarm of bacteria at left, above? That's Lactobacillus Acidophilus, present in enormous quantities in decay-active mouths. This villain causes formation of acids that many dental scientists believe produce cavities in teeth. Notice—at right: Laboratory tests show whenever Colgate Ammoniated Tooth Powder is used, these bacteria are greatly reduced. Colgate's formula, containing ammonium salt and carbamide, gives you three benefits:

1—Helps neutralize tooth-destructive acids, considered a major cause of tooth decay.

2—Kills harmful, acid-producing bacteria.

3 Definite Benefits To Help Prevent Tooth Decay

1. Colgate Ammoniated Tooth Powder helps neutralize destructive mouth acids that many dental authorities believe is a major cause of tooth decay.

2. It inhibits growth of acid-producing bacteria, Lactobacillus Acidophilus, in the mouth.

3. It helps remove from teeth gluey film in which such harmful bacteria thrive.

Forgotten Men

Congressman Multer's proposal to tack a congressional and judicial pay increase onto the executive pay bill in the House is ill-advised and assuredly inopportune. Whatever may be its intent, the result might easily be the defeat of the thoroughly justified salary increases for top officials in the executive branch because of the thoroughly doubtful raises for members of Congress and Federal judges.

One of the strongest arguments for revision of the executive salary checks is that there has been none for many years. Cabinet officers still get the $15,000 salaries they did 20 years ago. Most of the second-rank officers in the Administration are held at the $10,000 limit. Members of some of the more recent commissions are more liberally paid. But the final result is a helter-skelter scale in which not a few assistants get more than their immediate superiors.

Regardless of the objective merits or demerits of paying members of Congress and Federal judges more than they now get, the argument of need for adjustment cannot be brought. All Federal judges, from the Supreme Court on down, got a $5000 jump in 1946. Congressmen increased their own pay from $10,000 a year to $12,500 plus a tax-free expense account of $2500—an effective salary of nearly $16,000—in the same year.

In short, both the legislative and judicial branches have already achieved a considerable adjustment since President Truman in September, 1945, recommended a $20,000 fully taxed salary for members of Congress as "the first step in creating a decent salary scale for all Federal Government employes—executive, legislative and judicial." The executive branch officers alone have been waiting for the adjustment due them. Except for the President and Vice President, they have been the forgotten men. It is time that Congress made up for delay—and it should be able to do so without thinking of the executive pay bill as a vehicle for slipping a few more bucks into its own pockets.

Vinson's Price

Chairman Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee asks a high toll as the price of approval of the Tydings bill to strengthen unification. He would so burden the bill with caveats that the net effect might well be to hamper rather than help efforts to achieve more efficiency in the military establishment.

Take, for example, Mr. Vinson's proposal for a civilian chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Here is the height of absurdity—a civilian in a job that calls for military decisions. The same situation may be seen in reverse in the Central Intelligence Agency, where there has been a chain of three military men in what should be a civilian directorship. Mr. Vinson compounds the anomaly by suggesting that the post of JCS chairman go to Undersecretary Early. That would perpetuate a gross defect which the Tydings bill seeks to eliminate—a situation in which the ultimate decisions on details of strategy and missions fall back on the civilian secretariat. Surely there is more danger in this sort of cumbersome hedge than in giving a military man power to compel decisions on military matters—especially since a military chairman of the Joint Chiefs still would be responsible to the Secretary of Defense.

Mr. Vinson would chip away at unification in other respects by arbitrarily prohibiting transfers between the services and by conferring on the civilian and military heads of each service the right to go to Congress at will. Here is the formula for more end runs, and for legislative interference in each interservice dispute. Mr. Vinson likewise would assert a special congressional prerogative by removing the military establishment from the area in which reorganization powers have been accorded the President.

Fear of military domination has been marked throughout the committee consideration of the Tydings bill. The fear is a thoroughly healthy one. However, the references to "Prussianization" seem to us to be considerably overdrawn, and the ban on a single chief of staff is meaningless, since no such office could be created without the assent of Congress. The fact is that under every provision of the Tydings bill civilian authority would remain supreme—through the Secretary of Defense, the President, and the appropriation powers of Congress.

Defense Secretary Johnson did not help his case yesterday by his evasion of the many questions about what, specifically, he had been prevented from doing for lack of authority. The answer is that interpretations of authority under the present law differ, and Mr. Johnson, so far, has succeeded more by force of personality and White House backing than by explicit statutory power. That alone is reason to confirm the authority in law. What Mr. Johnson is asking, basically, is that the Secretary of Defense have binding rather than general supervision of the three armed services and that the Department of Defense be constituted like any other executive department. The changes are essentially the same as those requested by Secretary Forrestal, who after 18 months of wrangling came to realize that one of the perils in a democracy is divided authority.

Blood In The Bay

The killing of Earl Nelson, a resident of Crisfield, Md., apparently much esteemed in his own community, has greatly exacerbated the bitterness long existing between Maryland and Virginia watermen in the lower Chesapeake Bay area; and unless there is some effectual intervention by the authorities of both States, is not unlikely to be followed by further bloodshed.

Nelson is reported to have been shot by a young deputy named David Acree in the service of the Virginia Conservation Commission. The circumstances are not entirely clear. Nelson had been fishing for crabs near the Maryland and Virginia border. There are now laws which make it a felony for fishermen from one State to invade the waters belonging to the other State. According to some accounts, Nelson's boat had drifted into Virginia waters when Acree boarded it from a patrolling seaplane and attempted to arrest him. According to other witnesses, the boat was safely on the Maryland side of the buoy that serves to mark the border. Since Nelson was apparently unarmed, it is possible to infer that Mr. Acree, whether or not he was justified in attempting the arrest, acted with a lamentable want of judgment. However, the version of the Virginia authorities is that the fisherman, instead of obeying an order to steer his boat alongside a patrol boat that was standing by, tried to snatch the deputy's rifle, which was accidentally discharged in a scuffle that followed.

The Governors of both States, eager to prevent a general outbreak of violence, have ordered full investigations, but it seems improbable that the responsibility for the shooting will ever be established to the satisfaction of both sides. It is even less probable that the predisposing cause of these disorders will be removed. In the last analysis the rivalries and animosities of the fishermen are traceable to the progressive depletion of the Chesapeake fisheries which formerly constituted one of the most valuable natural resources of the entire continent and which are now rapidly approaching the point of exhaustion. One great factor in this spoliation, and perhaps the greatest one, has been the pollution of the Chesapeake waters by various industries injudiciously located alongside the tributary streams and the tidal rivers. But another factor has been the perhaps natural disposition of the fishermen to put the interests of their own families above those of posterity in general.

The difficulties which attended their work in days of sail power and oar power prevented their catches from exceeding the possibilities of natural reproduction, but all that was changed by the advent of the gasoline motor. What has happened is best shown in the depletion of the oyster fisheries, mainly through the practice of dredging which is destructive even of the beds. Two generations ago the Maryland fisheries yielded about 15 million bushels annually. By 1946 the yield had dwindled to about 2½ million bushels.

Other forms of edible marine life formerly abundant, such as the diamondback terrapin, are now almost extinct. The crabs which once abounded almost everywhere along the shores of the bay become scarcer with every year, and the fact that fishing boats from Crisfield have had to venture so far for them is in itself a melancholy sign. As the fishing grounds become fewer, it is only to be expected that quarrels over the rights in surviving grounds will become more acute and intense.

Lilienthal's Turn

David E. Lilienthal is abundantly right, it seems to us, in asserting that the results of atomic production are relevant to the charges of mismanagement. Judging from the testimony yesterday before the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, those results in terms of the atomic bomb stockpile, are impressive.

During his five-week cross-examination of Mr. Lilienthal, Senator Hickenlooper showed an almost unique ability to concentrate on minor details while missing the big issues. He did, to be sure, develop some instances of bad judgment by the Atomic Energy Commission on such items as plant expenditures and some indications of laxity in security. But such mistakes are inevitable in an effort to get a big job done. Nowhere, in our opinion, did Mr. Hickenlooper document his contention of "incredible mismanagement" against Mr. Lilienthal—who, although he bears the title of chairman, is only one of a five-member commission. By the time Senator Hickenlooper was through, it was pretty apparent that he had been engaging in a political fishing expedition intended to succor his reelection chances in Iowa.

The fizzle which Senator Hickenlooper made of his inquisition does not mean that there is not room for closer scrutiny of atomic energy operations. We hope that Mr. Lilienthal will acknowledge the commission's mistakes and will attempt to galvanize the Joint Committee into doing the sort of watchdog job it was set up to do. For any enterprise, especially a governmental monopoly, benefits from informed criticism. Certainly there ought to be more consultation between the commission and this arm of Congress, though we question the wisdom of Senator McMahon's proposal to give the Joint Committee executive responsibility by enabling it to veto large expenditures by the commission.

The most vital job Senator McMahon and his colleagues can do at this point is to get more nonsecret information about atomic energy, especially in its peacetime applications, before Congress and the public.

Cripps' Policy

Some more belt-tightening is indicated for the austere British as a result of Sir Stafford Cripps' policy for coping with the so-called dollar crisis. A cut in imports from America seems likely to reduce their rations, curb their automobiling, and cut down their smoking. On this reduced fare everybody is expected to work harder in order to push British sales in the dollar area. It is a bleak prospect, though Sir Stafford holds out hope of "a permanent solution" of the deficit problem in company with the United States and the commonwealth.

The first step in "a permanent solution" is the realignment of currencies. The pound is overvalued. It is rigged at slightly over $4 to the pound, though in the black or natural market pounds are said to be available at around $2.50. The high official rate amounts to a sort of Chinese wall between the British exporter and the American consumer. When the goods land on this side, they are tagged with an extra price in dollars equal to the difference between the natural rate of the dollar-pound exchange and the official rate. It is the consensus that this explains only in part the fact that in many lines the British have priced themselves out of the American market. The basic reason is, as Sir Stafford explained, the high costs of British manufacture, but an inflated pound is certainly a contributory factor.

To devaluation Sir Stafford has turned a stony face, in his name and in that of "British treasury officials." In truth the problem is full of thorns. What the British would gain on the swings they would lose on the roundabouts—that is to say, their exports would cost less but their imports would cost more. This is a problem for the British to wrestle with. But the issue is of concern to the world as well as to the British, for, the longer the British pound has to be maintained on an artificial level, the less likelihood is there of developing that common market in Europe on which the Marshall Planners are depending. Seven or eight currencies would be in line for revaluation as soon as Britain took the lead.

Some day or other a realignment must come, and the time will never be "right," as Secretary Sherman recognized in 1875 when the United States resumed specie payments. He ended all argument "about it and about" by saying the way to resume is to resume. These matters are what the military nowadays call "calculated risks"— undertaken when do-nothingness is tantamount to deterioration.

Pact In The Senate

Both the majority and the minority leaders in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee have done a competent job of exposition of the Atlantic Pact and of the committee's report on the pact. They are backed by a 100 per cent vote in the commiteee, and the tradition of recent treaties is that the Senators follow the lead of their committee, especially when the committee has thrashed out the subject in hand thoroughly. That this was the case in respect of the Atlantic Pact is undeniable. The commitee members even allowed Senators Donnell and Watkins, the two most vocal critics, to sit with them during the hearings and ask questions. They took full advantage of the committee's gesture and added to the "great debate" which was going on simultaneously throughout the country.

Partly because of Senator Connally's caution in dissociating the pact from the military assistance program, partly because of Senator Vandenberg's assurance that not much of this assistance will be involved, MAP has been sidetracked in the present discussion. It is not sidetracked, in our view, in the public mind. To be sure, the pact as such merely reaffirms, in conformity with Article 51 of the Charter, the anti-aggression obligations undertaken when the United States signed and ratified the United Nations Charter. But the military implications in the pact to back up the words of that pledge are clear as daylight to the average American. Article 3 of the pact provides that in order to carry out their promises of self-defense and mutual aid, the parties "will maintain and develop their individual and collective capacity to resist armed attack." Article 9 goes further. It establishes a permanent council representing all the parties which is to set up immediately a defense committee. Now, clearly, a defense committee deals in arms, and it is our hope that, as soon as the present discussion in the Senate has been concluded, there will be not a moment's delay in taking up the military aid program. One thing at a time is a good motto; but when these two items are twins, any delay will undermine the usefulness which the pact has as a deterrent to war. It will be time, after this, to carry out Senator Vandenberg's proposal that the President should explain to the world the policy on which the United States has embarked.

ANOTHER DREAM

O gallant heart, defeated,
Now gazing toward the west,
Where this day's splendor crumbles,
Disastrous and unblest;
Look—till the deathlike darkness
By stars be glorified,
Until you see another dream

"Attack On Barden"

I am writing to commend you most heartily for your very clear and courageous editorial of June 22 on the Barden bill. It was splendidly stated and could not but appeal to every fair-minded loyal American.

I have been surprised that Congressman John E. Fogarty in his letter of July 1 seems so completely to have missed the point in this whole controversy. He implies that it, the Barden bill, if passed, would be unjust to many children who as Americans have equal rights with other children. But the Barden bill does not discriminate. It gives its benefits to all children, provided they attend the schools promoted and supported by the Government. To do otherwise would be to give tax money for sectarian religious purposes.

In this country, because of the Protestant tradition of freedom, there is given the liberty for any church or group to provide its own schools, but in so doing such group must, of necessity, assume full financial support for schools it may desire. Once this principle is breached and any secular or sectarian group gets its hands in the United States Treasury for its sectarian schools, that day our public schools, which have made so signal a contribution to American democracy, are doomed.

More power to you in the publication of such clear-cut editorials. EDWARD O. CLARK, Minister, Chevy Chase Baptist Church.

Isobel Baillie

Isobel Baillie is no more an "English singer" than Robert Burns was an English poet—or, for that matter, than Winston Churchill is a Scottish statesman.

Although Scotland sends representatives to the British Parliament, which for geographical and historical reasons meets in London, Scottish law, racial background and mores are quite different from those of England.

Scots and English work together, with the Northern Irish and the Welsh, in the same way as Californians and New Yorkers, New Englanders and Texans and the rest—for the benefit of the larger unity. But to confuse any one of the individual members of that unity with any other is as incorrect, and also as irritating, as it would be to call a Texan a New Yorker simply because he is also an American.

The Washington Post is normally an accurate newspaper, and it is gratifying to find that, although most of The Post's references to Miss Baillie have described her as an "English singer," Paul Hume, on July 4, refers to her as a "British soprano."

Borrowed Language

In reply to W. A. C.'s criticism (June 30) of my letter about a German's remarks favoring ERP, I have the following to say:

It is not strange that this young man should write Americanese, rather than English flavored with German or British idiom. He was a prisoner of war in the States for over a year. His early pre-war studies had given him a knowledge of English which was materially aided in his tour of duty, so to speak. In total, he worked in six different camps, ranging from New York to Texas to San Francisco. In one camp, he served as an interpreter; in another, he was editor of the German newspaper. This work frequently included translation of American newspaper editorials.

Again, he currently is preparing a series of articles aimed at [illegible] publication in the U.S.A. They [illegible] about his various experiences and observations of the United States from behind the barbed wire." As he is a talented writer, he may have [illegible] perusing Time to catch [illegible] of the American flavor and [illegible] unconsciously employed some of its language.

"Arbitration In Hawaii"

Leis and much aloha to you for your June 26 editorial revealing that there are compelling reasons why arbitration at this juncture of the Hawaiian longshore strike would be unfortunate.

Speaking as one of the half a million people who live here, though a malahini (newcomer) of one year's residence, I would like to reiterate that it is the people, not the "Big Five," who are the victims.

To illustrate, I have a young daughter who requires canned milk for her formula. For the last three weeks I have been required to obtain a medical certificate from her doctor to be eligible to purchase it. Three times I have been down to my last can; but for the graciousness of my neighbors she would have gone without. Eggs flown from the mainland are $1.19 a dozen, potatoes 40 cents a pound.

Since we came here to live I have always felt Hawaii to be a bit of the United States set out here in the Pacific. Now, I wonder, when a minority can cause such worry and financial loss to the majority and the Federal Government turns its back as if to say we don't belong.

Food In Britain

I refer to an item in the Daily Mail, London, of July 1 reporting remarks in Washington by Mr. Gavin Fisher, assistant director of the British Rayon Federation. Apparently another visiting fireman has been shooting off his mouth.

People who had any knowledge of conditions in this country before the war, know that the average working man is better fed now than he was then. Present day rationing is not controlled by the contents of one's wallet as it was so often in the past. Many of us are fond of caviar and foie gras but it does us no harm to do without these items.

The amount of meat left on the side of the plate in America is entirely irrelevant. If a good friend and admirer of America may comment, I would point out that this has always been a characteristic of Americans eating in restaurants where the portions served have always been large.

Mr. Fisher's statement that the food situation has definitely affected British athletes in international contests is all baloney. The Oxford and Cambridge athletic team, which recently visited you, did not do too badly after becoming acclimated.

Fats are our chief trouble but even here the situation is gradually improving. It is unfortunate that prominence is given in the United States to the ditherings of some British businessmen who should know better.

Theater Festival

Live theater in Washington, once more, is cause for rejoicing, indeed! The Washington Theater Festival deserves a vote of appreciation for making this possible. The cast of "Amphitryon 38" deserves medals for superb sportsmanship and good nature in accepting the handicaps that burden outdoor theaters (and concerts) in our beautiful city.

"D. C. Swimming Pools"

It does not appear that the swimming pool disturbance was of a grave nature such as to threaten the peace and security of the community at large. But if it were true that it would be unsafe to open the pools on a nonsegregated basis, it appears to me that the pools should be closed to all until community sentiment subsides.

If by creating untoward situations, the white community can successfully deprive Negroes of their fundamental rights, we have a situation in which the white community can, by their own wrongful acts, penalize innocent Negroes. I can think of no more simple way to maintain segregation than for those who are opposed to it to be in a position where they can themselves create the threat of danger and thereby deprive Negroes of their rights. It is a shameful thing to think that there are citizens in the Nation's Capital who are so depraved. It is more unthinkable that the community and the Recreation Board should be victimized by such tactics.

U. SIMPSON TATE,
Regional Special Counsel, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.
Washington

They, however, in the recent swimming pool disturbances in Anacostia, did not plan for this by having adequate police and guard personnel sympathetic to this program or informing the white swimmers that this was a Government pool and therefore open to all people. The Civic associations, white and colored, in this community were asleep in this respect also.

Disturbances like the above only come from a sore point or something being wrong. The point here was and is a lack of swimming facilities for the colored in the Southeast.

CHARLES E. QUALLS.

Prejudice can be wiped out only by honest, intelligent and forthright leadership in both, for that matter, in all races. Negroes must continue to have the patience of Job. They cannot tear down in one fell swoop the prejudice that built up century by century. There will be trying times for everyone until prejudice is uprooted but they can be lessened by courageous and unselfish leadership.

LOUIS R. FAULKNER.
Louisville, Ky.

White attacks upon Negroes at swimming pools are as much a form of violent overthrow of our Government as any Communist can advocate. Let us maintain existing laws against such violence. If the laws are bad; let us amend them by orderly processes of law.

Room For Newcomers

Top Job Chances

ONE OF THE many problems growing out of the world's population imbalance is that of giving new people a chance to get along. For growing crowded conditions of this planet are the result not only of human breeding but also of longer living by those already intrenched.

Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, who resigned last week as editor of The Richmond News-Leader, gave as one of his reasons his desire to give a younger man a chance at a top post. He had himself become editor of the paper at 29. Thereby he unwittingly became exhibit No. 1 of a principle set forth recently by population experts.

It is that while older people should remain productive as long as possible, yet their delayed retirement should not apply to high positions, as youth should be encouraged to seek these.

This is one of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Population, which recently reported on a five-year study of British population trends. The commission pointed out that the aging of the population was likely to increase competition for promotion and a "powerful sense of frustration may arise among the young." Yet it also advocated the productive use, rather than the shelving of older people.

DR. FREEMAN, who is 65, is giving up executive duties to devote all his time to more creative work, including his historical writing. He will be as occupied as ever—only in a different role.

A trend to hand over high executive jobs to younger and younger men has been steadily growing in business, largely because of the physical strain such posts entail. But unfortunately business has been failing to balance this with more productive use of the wisdom, experience and skill of mature and older people in jobs that would involve less strain. It has been lowering its age for hiring, also for retirement, without reference to individual capacities. Its shelving of workers by calendar age has been repeatedly condemned by authorities on geriatrics (the science of aging) as stupid and wasteful.

A few firms are beginning to recognize the variations in individuals and to take inventory of their human resources. Out of this is expected to grow more exploration of means to use the gifts and talents, as well as experience, of older workers, while at the same time keeping opportunities open for youth to advance to posts where its energy, sound nerves, and enthusiasm are needed.

BUT UNLESS a large part of the population is to live a sterile and frustrating life on pensions and handouts, Government and industry will have to get busy on a comprehensive study of the situation in this country, and on a program to open work opportunities to both old and young.

Another place this plan of giving the younger population a chance needs to apply is Congress. Strangely, while business is rapidly pushing younger men—in the early fifties and in the forties—into its tough executive spots, congressional committee chairmanships generally stay in control of the graybeards. So do memberships on the more important committees.

Yet the daily wear and tear, and nerve strain a member of Congress with important committee responsibilities undergoes is probably greater than that of the head of a big corporation. Meanwhile many new and younger members of Congress run up against the futility and frustration that the Royal Commission warned against. Moreover, the voters who sent these new members to Congress have their voices stifled.

Yet it is true that men long in Congress have valuable experience and viewpoint to contribute—as does the man long connected with a business firm. There should be some way in Congress, and in all other legislative bodies, as well as in business, to even up the opportunities for both new and old people so the Nation could benefit by the productive power of both.

Indifferent Police

My experience of trying to report a drunken driver indicates the inficiency of the police in dealing with traffic menaces despite the frequent and highly touted safety campaigns.

I found myself behind a car obviously driven by a man incapable of driving it safely. He wove from one side of the highway to the other just before the turn from the airport onto the 14th st. bridge, he drove off onto a dirt siding and stopped. I suppose he was drunk.

I noted his license plate number and as soon as I saw a policeman I stopped and reported the incident to him. The policeman said he would tell headquarters the next time he called in. He didn't leave his post on the curb and when I urged him to report immediately, he replied that he would tell headquarters about it when he telephoned them next.

I then telephoned the police myself from a gas station but when I told them where I had seen the drunken driver, I was informed that I should call the Arlington County police.

I telephoned the Arlington County police but was told that I should call the Park police. By this time about half an hour had elapsed since I saw the drunken driver. CARITA LAURENCE.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Crisis Of European Recovery

NOTHING could be more unwelcome and inconvenient than another international crisis. A tired and uncomfortable Congress is hoping to adjourn and everyone would like to take a vacation from the heat and from trouble. But during the past few months a world-wide crisis has been in the making which threatens the postwar reconstruction and could jeopardize our foreign policy.

LIPPMANN

This crisis is now disclosed by the British Treasury figures showing the rate at which the gold and dollar reserves of the sterling area are being exhausted. Though the exact figures, which are published every three months, have been a top secret until Sir Stafford Cripps laid them before Parliament yesterday, it has been evident for some time that Britain and the sterling area were in very serious trouble. The figures show that even with Marshall aid they are moving rather rapidly not towards recovery but towards insolvency. That is the least alarming language in which this crisis can truthfully be described.

THERE IS no likelihood, it seems to me, that we shall be able to ride out this crisis cheaply and easily. All the choices abroad and at home are painful. All the remedies abroad and at home are hot to handle. The risks which have to be chosen deliberately and very soon, are inordinately difficult to calculate.

But the Truman Administration and the country cannot avoid making the initial and fundamental decision which is whether we can and should intervene with special and extraordinary measures. The alternative, which is nonintervention, is to confine our own efforts to controlling the recession in this country, leaving the United Kingdom and the nations of western Europe to deal with the world crisis by their own separate devices, by such measures as each government by itself is able, willing, or compelled, to take.

IT WILL be tempting to feel that if after the World Bank, the Monetary Fund, UNRRA, the Brtitish and the French loans, interim aid and the Marshall Plan, the crisis is breaking out once more, then the solution will have to be found in Europe and not here.

But I do not believe that we cen afford to risk the consequences of nonintervention and of letting nature take its course. The political and the economic risks are too great.

THE CRISIS must bring with it unemployment and a declining standard of life in the most sensitive areas of Europe. There is no reason to think that a Socialist government in Britain, or the working people of the Continent who are predominantly Socialist, will accept passively the disappointment and the suffering.

They are in the fifth year after the ordeal of the war, in the second year of the bright promises of the Marshall Plan. The governments, their backs to the wall, will not be passive. They will be bound to make a determined, indeed a ruthless, effort to equalize the sacrifices and to find substitutes for the supplies that they can no longer buy in North America. They will use all their power and influence, as sovereign collectivist states, to monopolize the markets and to promote cutthroat competition. They will discriminate against American exports not only to Britain and the sterling area but to any other country, like the Argentine for example which can be forced by its own necessities to collaborate with them.

The world, already divided by the iron curtain, will become subdivided further by the sterling and the dollar curtains.

YET ALL these measures will be defensive. They will be undertaken, even by convinced Socialists, not for the love of planning as such but in order to save their dwindling reserves of dollars and in order to eke out enough food and raw materials to avoid a catastrophic fall in the popular standard of life.

But the net result will be to set in motion a vicious spiral of deflation. Trade will contract. Productivity will decline. The depression will become deeper and more unmanageable. For there are no important and effective measures which any British government, Socialist, Conservative, or coalition, can take at this time by its own powers and with its own resources alone, that are not defensive, restrictive, and deflationary. All the reforms that must be undertaken,—to reduce the British costs of production, to develop the unused resources of Africa and the colonial empires, and to expand trade by liberating it,—are reforms that take a long time. They cannot resolve the crisis of 1949. To insist on them as the only remedies is like asking a man to start learning to play the violin tomorrow morning in order to give a violin concert at the end of next week.

WE SHALL have to face up to the reality which is that the postwar crisis in Europe cannot be resolved except over a long period in an expanding world economy. But the world economy will contract and will not expand unless—by measures that reach far beyond the present Marshall Plan—dollars and sterling and the other key currencies of world trade become once again international, not merely local and regional money,—and until, that is to say, they have been made convertible each with the other at a rate which can be supported and kept reasonably stable.

THE FIRST year of the Marshall Plan has demonstrated that it can provide needed relief but also that it offers no prospect of a return to true markets where men can buy and sell competitively with genuine money. The second year of the Marshall Plan has begun with a crisis which threatens to strangle the world economy because the world currencies are inconvertible.

If we cannot conceive and negotiate with Europe, and enact, and put into effect great and new measures to bring the key currencies together at a rate where they can be stabilized and made convertible, the free world will become subdivided into closed trading systems. Within these systems all will become poorer and the more vulnerable nations, which are politically the most important ones, will sink into deep depression, and certain of them, at least, into disorder.

Hiss Counsel Calls Chambers Traitor, Thief, Mental Case

typed them, by testimony that the typewriter involved—an old Woodstock—was out of their possession before the dates shown on the papers—in early 1938.

Stryker said four handwritten memoranda, admittedly in Hiss's writing, and microfilmed copies of other documents in Chambers possession, "could have been picked up, and undoubtedly were picked up, in a wastebasket, or on a desk . . ."

Testimony has shown, he declared, that security provisions were not stringent in the State Department in 1938. "Wadleigh or some other thief who conspired with Chambers," Stryker charged, could easily have obtained them.

The name of Henry Julian Wadleigh was repeatedly mentioned in the impassioned summation by Stryker.

On June 16, Wadleigh, former State Department economist, admitted he did supply Chambers with documents for a Russian espionage ring starting in 1936 and continuing to about the beginning of 1938.

But Wadleigh said he had no knowledge of passing any of the documents in evidence in this case to Chambers, and said that at any rate he never typed copies.

Commenting on his inability to shake Wadleigh's testimony on this score, Stryker said Wadleigh was such an "abject specimen of mankind that I felt I was just jumping on something that was already down."

"Do I know that he (Wadleigh) got these films and gave them to Mr. Chambers at that time?" Said Stryker, asking himself the question. "No, I do not know. All I know is the facts in this case . . ."

Rips Into Chambers' Past

To conceive that if Hiss were an espionage agent he would be stupid enough to place the "hallmark" of his own writing on incriminating papers, said Stryker, ". . . you would have to believe that Alger Hiss was far below normal intelligence, and there is no one in this case who has suggested that."

Boiling Chambers' character in the oil of degradation, Stryker pounded the jury rail, wrinkling his face in disgust as he mentioned Chambers, admitted Communist spy ring courier and later a $30,000-a-year senior editor for Time Magazine.

Stryker referred to his background as "unusual . . . eccentric . . . abnormal" and "psychopathic sadism."

When Chambers appeared before the House Committee on Un-American Activities last August to accuse Hiss of being a Communist, said Stryker, he had the idea "of doing a sort of a fast sideswipe on Alger Hiss."

Stryker said Chambers went out of his way there deliberately to mention Hiss' work in the Yalta Conference, the Dumarton Oaks Conference, and the Charter Conference for the United Nations at San Francisco.

"Alger Hiss—Yalta—Dumbarton Oaks—San Francisco," shouted Stryker, his eyes flashing. "It was a wonderful red herring to insert into the campaign to take people's minds off the Eighteith Congress.

"You remember the Eighteith Congress?"

All political polls, said Stryker, pointed to a Republican victory, and "he (Chambers) chose what he thought was the strongest side."

". . . He guessed wrong on that. Alger Hiss is the kind of a man, gentle and kindly as he looks, with steel in his frame, and he didn't take it lying down."

As Stryker piled on his colorful oratory, his voice now rising to a thundering roar and then dropping to a stage whisper, the 44-year-old Hiss and his petite, 45-year-old wife, Priscilla, looked on without any change of expression.

Behind them sat Mrs. Hiss' son by her first marriage, Timothy Hobson, 22, appearing in the courtroom for the first time. A good-looking youth with close-cropped hair, he cupped his chin in his hand as he watched Stryker striding back and forth in front of the jury box.

Deposition Read

Sitting beside Hodson was the Rev. Duane Wevill of Maplewood, N. J., octogenarian retired Episcopal minister who officiated at Hiss' christening, and who has been in the courtroom on several occasions.

Stryker was originally scheduled to complete his summation today, the twenty-fifth day of the trial, but the summation was delayed an hour for the reading of a deposition from the final defense witness, Mrs. Lewin W. Wickes, of Chestertown, Md.

Resting the defense case at 11:51, Stryker made another unsuccessful motion to dismiss the indictment.

Prosecutor Thomas F. Murphy leaned his six-foot-four-inch bulk casually back in a chair as Stryker addressed the Federal jury of ten men and two women.

A close trial schedule is set for Thursday, as Judge Samuel H. Kaufman hopes to send the case to the jury late in the afternoon.

Court will convene at 10 a. m., and after Stryker completes his summation, Murphy will sum up for the prosecution and the judge's charge will follow.

Pounds at Three Words

The principal defense contention of the day, made publicly for the first time, rested on the language of the first count of the indictment.

This states that "in or about the months of February and March, 1938," Hiss "furnished, delivered and transmitted to one David Whittaker Chambers . . . secret, restricted and confidential documents . . ."

Stryker pounded at these words. "Furnished, transmitted and delivered," he shouted, "three verbs—three words."

"Count two," he stated, "is really telescoped into Count 1." Count Two alleges Hiss perjured himself in denying he did "see and converse with the said Mr. Chambers in or about the months of February and March, 1938 . . ."

Quotes Prosecutor

"In other words," declared Stryker, "if you find Mr. Hiss did not meet Mr. Chambers in February or March, 1938 to deliver these documents, the second count goes out with it."

"There is only one witness in the whole world who says that Mr. Hiss furnished, transmitted and delivered these papers—and that man is Mr. Chambers."

Flinging the opening statement of Prosecutor Murphy back at him, Stryker quoted him," . . . If you don't believe Mr. Chambers we have no case. Under the Federal perjury rules, as Judge Kaufman will tell you, you need one witness and corroboration, for if one of the props goes out, out goes the case."

He portrayed Chambers as an inveterate liar, traveling for years in the Communist Party under false names . . . "A petty larceny thief . . . a blasphemer of Christ" with no respect for marriage "or the sanctity of the home."

"I wouldn't believe him," thundered Stryker, "if the FBI erected a stack of Bibles as high as this building."

Cites Perjury Admissions

Chambers admitted seven acts of perjury before the grand jury which indicted Hiss and the House committee, Stryker declared, by first denying any knowledge of espionage activities and then accusing Hiss of this for the first time last November—after Hiss filed a $75,000 libel suit against him.

When Chambers finally produced his documents at the request of Hiss' attorneys, said Stryker, Hiss immediately notified the Attorney General. "Was that the act of a guilty man?"

Stryker compared the House proceedings to the "French revolutionary tribunals of 1793 where they haul up a suspect, yell at him, and someone would go up and spit in his face . . . " Chambers, he shouted, "went down there to commit perjury and did commit perjury!"

Then, declared Stryker, Chambers explained he withheld the documents to avoid injuring Hiss "any more than necessary." Can you think, Stryker said mockingly, "of anything worse than for someone to call you the concealed enemy of your country?"

"That reminds me," he said, "of the lady who picked up a shotgun and blasted with both barrels and blew off the top of her husband's head, and then said, 'I pulled the trigger sort of soft, because I have been very fond of him'."

Referring to the testimony here by Writer Malcolm Cowley who said Chambers told him in 1940 that Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre—Hiss' superior in 1938—was a Communist underground worker, Stryker said:

". . . He (Chambers) picked at that time, Mr. Sayre as his target. Whether or not he (Chambers) had at that time those notes and those typewritten papers, I don't know, but the story would just as well fit Mr. Sayre."

When Chambers hid the microfilm documents in a pumpkin on his farm, said Stryker, "Was that the act of a rational, normal man?"

On "two or three" of the microfilmed papers, Stryker recalled were the initials "A.H." which Hiss said were his own, put there "when an officer finished with the documents."

On three typewritten documents, Stryker declared, were "interlineations . . . certain bits of handwriting," and there has been no testimony as to whose handwriting they were in.

Three of Batory Crew Escape From Ship

New York, July 6 (U.P.).—Three crew members of the Polish liner Batory on which Communist Gerhard Eisler fled the United States jumped ship in New York Harbor today and escaped through a triple line of immigration guards.

C. H. Pennington, immigration inspector, said all three men were kitchen workers. He said they climbed down a rope and swam away just before the Batory was scheduled to sail.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Combating Depression

PRESCRIPTIONS to revive a slightly ailing economy are raining down like leaves in the fall. They come from every side and some bear perfectly obvious political labels.

Childs

While theoretically the President's Council of Economic Advisers functions in a stratosphere far above politics, that is actually not the case at all. The politics of this recession could not be excluded from the council table, which is one reason it took so long to come up with a final report that the President could approve.

The main pressures come from opposite directions. From the New Deal wing of the Democratic majority in Congress have come repeated recommendations for the familiar prescription of public works and publi investment after the formula of the British economist, the late John Maynard Keynes.

A new Keynesian package has been presented to the White House by three Senators, John Sparkman of Alabama, James Murray of Montana and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota. It calls for the authorization of at least 15 billion dollars of Federal funds, part of which would be used not for direct spending but to guarantee private investment. Of the three presidential advisers, Leon Keyserling leans most strongly in this direction.

AT THE other pole from this well-advertised formula is the counsel of a group close to the President which has been cautioning him against rushing in with drastic measures before they are really necessary. They argue that no proper fire department would rush all equipment to put out what is as yet no more than a smudge.

This counsel comes, above all, from the Federal Reserve Board. Almost unnoticed by the general public the board has in recent months taken a series of steps to ease credit and counter the disinflationary trend.

Controls over consumer installment credit have been relaxed. Stock market margin requirements were reduced and member bank reserve requirements were lowered, releasing about $1,200,000,000 of reserves, These steps all have been taken in the hope of releasing the normal forces of recovery inherent in the system itself.

As the argument has been put up to the President, and it seems to make eminent good sense, timing is of the essence in the present situation. To rush in with a mustard plaster of public works before the patient really needs such a drastic remedy is to take a serious risk.

What the eager prescribers seem to forget is that the circumstances of 1949 are quite different from the circumstances of the early New Deal era when the public-spending-through-public-works concept was first tried out. Then the public debt was only $22,500,000,000.

Today with a public debt of 250 billion dollars there are definite limits on deficit financing. It could not be pushed far without producing a reaction that might be exactly the opposite of the one desired.

THIS, of course, is where timing is so essential. To exhaust all the remedies before they were really necessary would be to face the possibility of a grave crisis with nothing to combat it. The firemen, having emptied all the chemical extinguishers on the smudge, would be helpless in the face of a serious blaze.

At the two political extremes there is a determination to exploit the recession. Henry Wallace's Progressive Party begins a statement with, "A full-blown depression is underway in the United States." That is a fine example of wishful thinking. It is also an example of the kind of propaganda best suited to the purposes of the Soviet Union, which seeks to create the impression that this country is sinking rapidly in an economic bog.

At the other extreme, Southern Democrats of the type of Senator Walter George of Georgia and ultraconservative and reactionary Republicans talk about Government economy and a balanced budget. They talk in this way as though the tragedy of Herbert Hoover and his futile effort to balance the budget in the face of falling revenue had never occurred. Government economy is imperative, but an effort to make outgo narrowly match income will merely aggravate the present difficulty.

What would be most effective at this moment would be a substantial cut in the taxes of individuals. But, by its hasty and ill-advised action in slashing taxes a year ago, the Eightieth Congress threw away that remedy and fanned the fire of inflation which was then burning most fiercely. If an example of bad timing were needed, there it is.

Meeting Mixup Enough to Make Boilermaker Boil

Seattle, July 6 (AP).—The boilermakers' union was in the middle of a tense session last night when a speaker rose to demand:

"Let's forget about the boilermakers and get down to discussing the business of our own union."

Inspection of the speaker's membership book showed he was in the wrong meeting.

He was a member of local 300, paperhangers, painters and decorators, meeting down the hall.

At the Olney

Sylvia Gives 'Pygmalion' Fine Sparkle

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW and Sylvia Sidney are starred at Olney this week, and it's a happy combination. "Pygmalion" is one of the funniest plays of the wit of Ayot St. Lawrence and Richard Skinner and Evelyn Freyman are giving if an excellent production.

Sylvia Sidney gives the play the sparkle and life which have been missing from previous Olney productions. Hers is a captivating performance of the little flower girl, Eliza Doolittle, who is transformed into a gentlewoman by the iconoclastic phonetician, Henry Higgins.

Playing with a part which is an enjoyable challenge to any young actress, Miss Sidney makes the transition from the unkempt girl of the streets to the brilliant and resourceful match for Henry, a successful tour-de-force. She seems to be having fun doing it and you'll have fun watching her, especially in the second act, when she undergoes her first public trial at a tea party.

Gordon as Henry

Gavin Gordon, as the self-reliant Henry, gives a very frenetic interpretation of the role. It's completely different from the assured, complacent playing of the part as Leslie Howard did it in the movie version. Personally, we feel that Howard's creation was more Shavian. As Gordon plays Henry, he seems almost unsure of himself, consumed by a desire to get on with the play and the evening. This is commendable in view of the heat but the result is that Henry emerges as a vain, almost psychotic personality instead of the urbane creature Shaw seems to have intended that he should be. The accent ought to be on the intellectual projection of the role rather than the emotional one. At any rate, lest we be misunderstood, Gordon's acting is good; but he ought to slow up in this warm weather.

The delight of the evening is Morton L. Stevens' portrayal of Eliza's father, Alfred Doolittle. It's the "fattest" part in the entire play, with the emphasis on the buffo. Stevens rises to the challenge and makes Alfred a thoroughly likeable scamp who accidentally becomes a preacher on the subject of middle-class morality, much to his sanguinary dislike.

Ensemble Acting Good

It's also a pleasure to report that the ensemble acting is of a much higher order than previous Olney productions. Every minor role is well played, especially Dean Harens as the imbecilic Freddie, Mary MacArthur as the ingenuous Clara Hill, and Donald Foster as Colonel Pickering.

However, to Shaw must go the responsibility for the success of the evening. It is he, as the critic of the foibles of society, who has given the players literate dialogue which is titillating to hear and ponder upon. Shaw always injects his social philosophy into whatever he writes. Many times the message has gotten into the way of the pleasure and entertainment. Not so in "Pygmalion"! He has blended high wit with low comedy to produce one of his best plays.

Transit Board Rejects Plan To Buy Stock

The board of directors of Capital Transit Co. yesterday rejected a suggestion that the company buy a controlling stock interest which a holding company has agreed to sell to a group of Florida interests.

North American Co., the holding company, has arranged to sell 109,458 shares of Capital Transit stock to the Florida group at $20 a share. The Securities and Exchange Commission is considering an application to approve the sale without competitive bidding.

It was suggested by C. L. McCrea that a special stockholders' meeting be held to consider purchase by Capital Transit of the North American stock.

The suggestion was turned down by the board yesterday which stated that ". . . due to legal complications and the financial requirements of the company, it is not in a position to make an offer to purchase the shares owned by the North American Co."

Stockholders Taking Vote in Fairchild Fight

Hagerstown, Md., July 6 (AP).—Stockholders of the Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corp. voted today whether to retain or oust the present management as a prolonged bitter battle for control neared its end.

Both sides, Fairchild's committee and management, agreed at the outset to assume presence of a quorum of votable stock.

If after the count (expected to last until tomorrow night) a quorum should prove to be lacking, the whole procedure would have to be undertaken again at another date.

The fight was between Sherman Fairchild, founder and a principal stockholder, and its management, headed by Board Chairman J. Carlton Ward, jr., and President L. B. Richardson.

A committee of stockholders joined with Fairchild in pressing the campaign for a new board. It called for greater economy in operations and higher dividends on part of the company.

An unusually large number of shareholders, more than 25, were on hand as the twice-postponed annual meeting got under way this morning to the tune of a few challenges and recriminations.

And all day long a small group of officials flanked by watchers waded painstakingly through thousands of proxies that are likely to determine the issue.

How many of the shares were voted today could not be ascertained but due to the acrimonious struggle a larger participation than normal was expected.

Richard Boutelle, who was relieved of his duties as general manager of the company's primary division here, is in line for the presidency if Fairchild's forces win.

Curbs Relaxed On Houses for 2 Families

The Fairfax County supervisors yesterday relaxed restrictions on erection of two-family houses by cutting in half the minimum lot size on which they may be built.

Uner the zoning ordinance amendment adopted yesterday, two-family dwellings may be constructed on single-family 7200-square foot lots in urban residential zones if (1) the board of zoning approves, and (2) if water and sewer facilities are available.

Builders had previously been forced to use as much land for a two-family house as they would for two one-family dwellings.

County Planning Engineer Thomas J. Stockton said the change would allow home construction in the eastern part of the county "at a cost closer to that which people are willing to pay."

The amendment must be advertised in county papers for two weeks before it is effective.

In other actions yesterday the supervisors:

Appointed Thomas E. McDonough as county electrical inspector to succeed Franklin P. Sagendorf, who resigned last month. McDonough, 46, is supervisor of mapping for Virginia Electri & Power Co., for which he has worked more than 26 years. He will receive an annual salary of $5000 plus travel allowance.

Decided to send two supervisors to the annual convention of county officials in Oakland, Calif., July 17.

Potter's Union Bars 6 Members For 10-Year Period

Atlantic City, N. J., July 6 (AP).—Six members of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters (AFL) have been barred for ten years from any active part in the affairs of their local unions.

The six were charged and found guilty by the union's convention last Saturday of violating the union's constitution by taking to an Ohio court a suit challenging pay increases for top officials of the brotherhood. The case now is in the Ohio Court of Appeals.

Unseated as delegates, Gill said, were Harry Finlay, E. C. Armstrong and Norman Whippler, all of East Liverpool. The three other men affected by the ban were Clyde McDaniel and Sheldon Johnston of East Liverpool and Ed Jones of Sebring, Ohio, Gill said. They were not present for the trial.

Armstrong was ousted as president of the union's local 124 and Whippler was removed as recording secretary of the same local.

Stocks Reach Peak Prices For 6 Weeks

New York, July 6 (AP).—A rising stock market gained momentum today and prices advanced to a six-week high.

In the largest step forward in a couple of weeks, individual issues moved up fractions to around 2 points, and in some cases more. It was the fifth advance in a row.

Buying picked up speed in the final hour and closing quotations were tops for the day.

Turnover amounted to 1,410,000 shares, one of the biggest totals of the year. Trading in the final hour alone amounted to 810,000 shares, a performance unmatched since May last year.

Volume was somewhat misleading, however, because trading in Commonwealth & Southern alone amounted to 481,000 shares. Even without C. & S. volume would still have been impressive judged by recent standards. Business yesterday totaled only 630,000 shares.

Big blocks of C. & S.—from 10,000 to 100,000 shares—spattered the ticker tape in late dealings. All transactions were made at a price of 4, up ⅛ point and equal to the year's high. Demand followed news from Wilmington, Del., that a Federal court had approved an amended plan for dissolution of the utility concern.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced .6 of one point to 61.2. This was the highest reached since 62.2 on May 27 when the market was going down rapidly.

The industrial group showed the largest increase, followed by rails in second place and utilities bringing up the rear.

Wall Street paid close attention to Sir Stafford Cripps' survey of Britain's financial position, with particular care given to his statement that the pound would not be devalued but that purchases of United States goods for dollars would be drastically reduced.

The effect on the market of Cripps' remarks was questionable. The opinion is widespread in the financial district that chances are strong that sooner or later England will be forced to lower the pound in terms of the dollar.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, July 6 (AP).—A strong, active market in wheat, backed by large sales of flour to bakers, featured dealings on the Board of Trade today.

Wheat opened higher and advanced throughout the day, nearby deliveries going to the best level since early February, before the big price break of that month. March and May wheat, in which trading has only recently started, made new seasonal highs.

Wheat closed 4¼-5⅜ higher, corn was ⅝-1⅞ higher, oats were ⅜-1⅜ higher, rye was 3 to 4 cents higher, soybeans were 1¾-5¼ higher and lard was 5 to 8 cents a hundred pounds lower.

The range follows:

June Sales In D. C. Issues Rose Over '48

June sales on the Washington Stock Exchange totaled 19,877 shares, an increase of 10,460 shares over that month last year but 2,961 shares fewer than the total for May.

Sales of Potomac Electric Power amounting to 12,645 shares, an increase of more than 7000 shares over June 1948, contributed substantially to the increase. The turnover in this issue made it the most popular on the exchange from the standpoint of volume. Sales of 1,654 shares of Capital Transit put it in second place, and third honors went to Virginia Electric & Power with sales of 1,460 shares.

PROMOTION: Quartus P. Graves, former Washington representative of Eversharp, Inc., has been promoted to Eastern regional manager in charge of sales of shaving and writing products.

ODD LOTS: The Bank of Commerce and Savings has completed renovations at its main office at Seventh and E sts. nw . . . At the first directors meeting of the Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants of the 1949-50 year in the board room of Government Services, Inc., it was announced that the following men had accepted invitations to address monthly meetings: T. Coleman Andrews, former director, Corporation Audits Division, General Acounting Office; I. Wayne Keller, assistant controller, Armstrong Cork Co.; Myron W. Krueger, treasurer, Raymond Concrete Pile Co., and T. W. Spicer, chief, auditing methods and results, Western Electric Co. . . . Dun & Bradstreet reports that commercial and industrial failures during the week of June 30 totaled 177 compared with 196 the previous week and 103 a year previously.

Maryland Tobacco

Baltimore, July 6 (AP).—Bidding for most grades continued strong as auction sales on the southern Maryland tobacco markets were resumed today, the United States Department of Agriculture and the Maryland Department of Markets reported.

The markets were closed Monday and Tuesday for the Fourth of July holiday.

Average prices today were about in line with quotations of last Friday, the agencies said, but volume of sales was fairly light.

Smaller percentages of good and fine tobacco lowered the general quality slightly.

Deliveries to the Maryland Tobacco Cooperative under the Government loan program were estimated at 2 per cent of the baskets sold, the agencies reported.

New York Cotton

New York, July 6 (AP).—Cotton futures turned reactionary today, following early steadiness, as increased liquidation in nearby July futures unsettled the balance of the market. Final prices were 55 cents to $1.35 a bale lower.

Selling of July was stimulated by the approach of final trading day in that delivery on July 13. In addition, a leading spot firm showed a greater willingness to sell July contracts against purchases of October and December, 1949, contracts at narrowing price differences. New crop months which advanced steadily in recent sessions proved vulnerable as stop loss selling orders were uncovered. Dealers reported the situation in new crop spot cotton quiet.

The range follows:

	Open	High	Low	Last
July	33.16	33.18	32.80	32.87	—27
October	29.56	29.58	29.25	29.45	—12

Rail, Utility Bonds Rise as U. S. Issues Turn Downward

New York, July 6 (AP).—Railroad and utility loans sustained the bond market's current recovery trend today by moving ahead along a broad price front.

A good selection of rail issues advanced from 1 to 2½ points as the Associated Press average of 20 rails moved up .1 of a point at 88.7. The utility average was boosted .2 to 103, a high mark not duplicated since October 23, 1947.

United States Treasury bonds softened for the first time since the Federal Open Market Committee signified its intention June 28 of allowing Government securities to rise in order to induce an easier credit policy by banks.

Although most issues showed modest gains during the earlier hours, late trading sent a number of medium and long-term issues to the minus side. The 2 1/4s of June and December, 1962-59, posted the extreme loss, each moving down 4/32 at closing bid prices of 102.5 and 102.4, respectively.

Government bond houses reported heavy demand from banks and corporations for the one-year certificates of indebtedness. The bid price yields on the issues of April 1, 1950, June 1, 1950, and July 1, 1950, all were forced down to 1.06 per cent from 1.12 per cent yesterday.

Williams Co. Is Low Bidder

Baltimore, July 6 (AP).—The State Roads Commission said today it had received a low bid of $382,517 for construction of a 1½-mile bypass to carry the Washington-Baltimore blvd. around Laurel.

The bid was submitted by the Williams Construction Co. of Baltimore. Four other bids were received, the highest $421,282. S. T. Brotmarkle Construction Co. of Cumberland turned in a low bid of $537,059 to straighten and improve a 3.5-mile stretch of U. S. Route 40 between Keyser's Ridge and the Pennsylvania State line.

Construction of a new stretch of U. S. 40 between Cumberland and Frostburg has been under way since last summer.

The commission announced these contract awards:

To F. P. Asher, Jr., & Sons of Annapolis, grade, drain and surface 4.2 miles of State Route 242 from Morganza to Clements in St. Marys County. The concern will receive $289,046.

Baughman Construction Co. of Cumberland, $44,150 to straighten a curve on U. S. Route 220 near the northern limits of Cumberland.

Truitt Fights for Panama Tanker Registry

By Robert S. Allen
Post Reporter

Vice President Alben Barkley's son-in-law is engaged in a sharp controversy with the U. S. Maritime Commission over his demand that a number of American tankers be allowed to register under the Panamanian flag.

The son-in-law is Max Truitt, one-time member of the commission.

The tankers belong to Standard Oil of New Jersey. Truitt is attorney for the giant oil corporation.

Under Panamanian registry of the tankers, Standard Oil would derive a number of very profitable advantages. Chief among these are the employment of low-cost foreign crews and the avoidance of U. S. income taxes.

16 Tankers Involved

Sixteen tankers are involved in Truitt's demand; 10 old and 6 big new ones. In a letter to the Maritime Commission early this year, Truitt proposed the following deal: That Standard Oil be permitted to transfer the registry of the 10 old tankers to Panama in exchange for operating six new ships under the United States Flag.

Commissioner Raymond McKeough vigorously opposed the proposal. By a split vote, the commission approved Panamanian registry for four tankers. Transfer was denied on the other six tankers, built during the war.

A Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee has strikingly revealed the high profitableness of operating American ships under Panamanian registry. The information was brought to light by Senator Warren Magnuson (D., Wash.), chairman of the subcommittee, during an interrogation of Millard G. Gamble, chief of the marine division of Standard Oil of New Jersey.

Gamble's answers to questions brought out the following facts:

Standard has 54 tankers under the United States Flag, totaling 897,000 tons, and 65 tankers under foreign flags totaling 1,033,000 tons.

The wage differential between operation under United States and foreign registry ranges from 50 to 74 per cent against United States crews.

European crews are used on the Panamanian-registered tankers.

Panama does not have corporation or income taxes. Its only tax on foreign ships that register under its flag is $1 per ton at the time of registry and 10 cents per tone a year thereafter.

The extent to which these advantages profited Standard Oil is disclosed in the following information obtained from Gamble:

The Panama Transport Co. is a wholly owned subsidiary of Standard of New Jersey. From 1944 through 1948, PTC made $15,744,000. These earnings, plus others prior to 1944, constituted a 20-million-dollar dividend PTC paid Standard early this year.

On this melon, Standard paid a United States tax of 38 per cent. Had its ships been operating under American registry during the five high-tax years, the rate would have been 80 to 90 per cent.

Financial Expert Held On Bad Check Charge

Los Angeles, July 6 (U.P.).—Thomas S. Hutchins, 34, who once earned $12,000 a year advising governments how to spend their money, was arrested today for a financial error—writing checks without funds.

Hutchins, an economist who said he formerly was employed by the United Nations as an advisor on financial problems, told officers he had been unemployed for a year. He said he was desperately in need of funds to care for his wife and children.

Children's Fund Bill Is Sent to White House

The House yesterday approved and sent to the White House a bill extending for one year U. S. participation in the International Children's Fund. It allows the expenditure of $17,305,681 authorized last year.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE NEW fangled two platoon system in football is here, and probably to stay, whether the customers like it or not. The paying fans may not like it, but the voice from the seats never has been as important to the coaches as the voice from the front office which demands winning football teams.

Jim Tatum, the Maryland U. coach, is the latest to surrender to the new idea of specialized offensive and defensive units in college football. He declares that Maryland has been driven to it, though he is personally opposed to the idea that a good offensive football player can't do a defensive job as well.

POVICH

"There is no help for it," says Tatum. "Maryland and the other teams that stick to the one squad play are going to get their ears pinned back. We can't lick the two platoon guys so we have to join 'em."

Tatum used Michigan State, a team on Maryland's schedule next season as an example of the problem he faces. "I know what is going on out there at Lansing. They've changed over to the two platoons so we have to play them on their own terms or give up any idea of winning.

HE POINTED out what is happening at Michigan State and the other two platoon schools. "They have a squad of say 44 men, so they divide them into 22-man defensive and offensive units. They have two hours of practice each day, and their defensive teams get two hours solid work on defense, their offensive clubs drill only on offense."

"That makes me change over. Michigan State isn't the only two platoon opponent we will face. We would be at a horrible disadvantage if I took my squad and tried to teach them 40 offensive plays and 28 defensive formations all in the same two-hour period. It's impossible for them to learn their jobs fully, splitting it up that way.

"So I'm going to turn 22 men over to my defensive coaches for two hours and I'm giving the offensive coaches their 22 men for the full two hours. The fans may not like our idea of running different units in and out of the ball game, but if they want to see us win, they'll have to make allowances. It's the only way we can make a showing."

LAST YEAR, Coach Earl Blaik of Army, was more or less famed as the introducer of the two-platoon system in college football. But the pros had beaten the colleges to those tactics several years before. It was they who first hit upon the idea of high specialization in order that more practice hours could be crowded into the daily workout.

Knute Rockne "shock troops" are never to be confused with the two-platoon system. Rockne's starting team, usually his second stringers and sometimes his third string, played both offense and defense for as long as they were in the game.

All of the big colleges haven't gone whole hog on the two platoon system but they are apparently headed that way. Notre Dame, Michigan and Penn, always among the top teams, substitute so freely now, that it is virtually an offensive unit that they use. They have disregarded the shock troop system.

THE FANS' objections to the two-platoon system is understandable enough. It robs the team of any personalities. They see a team lose the ball, and 11 strange guys move into the lineup. Substitutions shuttle on and off the field so freely that no fan of less ken than a public accountant can keep tabs on the numbers, or know who is playing, and who isn't.

The pros have been overdoing it. Redskin fans don't know if Sammy Baugh can catch a punt. They haven't seen him do it in years. They've seen Redskin halfbacks and fullbacks in action for 30 minutes without carrying the ball. They're merely defensive players, and the fans don't know if the good ball carriers can make a tackle because they are in there only on offense.

One day the Redskins lined up for the opening kickoff with no guards and only one backfield man in their lineup. Because the Redskins were kicking off, they took the field with five ends, three tackles, two centers and one back, and if the fans were somewhat confused, no wonder.

40-Year-Old's 67 Paces British Open, Locke Has 69

Sandwich, England, July 6 (AP).—Jimmy Adams, a chubby Scotsman, ripped off a sizzling 67 at Royal St. Georges today to outshoot 95 rivals in the first round of the British Open Golf Championship.

A putter that performed beautifully in perfect weather enabled the 36-year-old Adams to complete the initial test in the 72-hole medal play tournament with a slender one stroke lead.

All told, 24 shotmakers beat par 72 for the 6728-yard St. Georges layout with playing conditions ideal.

Harry Bradshaw of Ireland, medalist in the 36-hole qualifying trials, and Roberto de Vicenzo, of Argentina, shared second place with 68.

Seven men were tied at 69, including South Africa's Bobby Locke, the 5 to 1 favorite to capture the first prize of 300 pounds ($1200). Fve others posted 70, putting 15 men in front of the two principal hopes of the United States.

Johnny Bulla, Phoenix, Ariz., professional, playing out of the Westmoreland Country Club at Pittsburgh, Pa., and Frank Stranahan, Toledo, Ohio, amateur, carded 71s, as did seven others. Both went out in 36 and came back in 35.

Willie Hunter, British-born Los Angeles professional and only other American in the tournament, was well down the list with a 75.

The 57-year-old Hunter, in England for the first time in 18 years, must improve tomorrow to earn a place among the 40 who will be allowed to play the last two rounds.

Adams toured the home nine in 34 to gain his advantage. The only man to beat him on the incoming nine was Ernest Southerden, who stroked it in 33 and was one of those tied at 69.

Southerden is an absolute unknown who doubles in brass as a professional and greenskeeper on a nine-hole course near here. The other 69s were carded by Ken Bousfield, Ken Adwick, Bill Skankland, Norman Sutton and John Fallon, all British professionals.

Chisox Beat Tribe, 9-6, With 3 In 8th

Chicago, July 6 (AP).—Bud Souchock's base-cleaning eighth inning double gave the Chicago White Sox a 9-6 victory over the Cleveland Indians before 24,444 persons tonight.

The victory, Chicago's fifth in as many games against the Indians here this season, provided Satchell Paige's fifth 1949 loss.

Cleveland, using 18 players, including six pitchers, pulled into a 6-6 tie with a four-run spurt in the top half of the eighth. In this rally Joe Gordon flied for one run, Robert Avila pinch singled for two more and Dale Mitchell connected for a safety before Al Gettel replaced starter Bob Kuzava.

Gettel halted the romp and went on to bag his second victory as Chicago scored three times in its half. Luke Appling opened the attack on Paige with his fourth single. Luke stopped at third on Cass Michaels' double off the left field bricks.

Priddy's Single Beats Tigers In 13th, 6-5

St. Louis, July 6 (AP).—Gerry Priddy singled Pitcher Tom Ferrick home with the winning run in the 13th inning to give the St. Louis Browns a 6-to-5 triumph over the Detroit Tigers tonight.

Detroit broke the tie in the 12th with a walk and two singles for one run but with two out in the last of that frame Jack Graham came up with his second homer of the game to send it into the 13th.

In the semi-windup, Felix Miquette body-slammed Monsieur Paris into defeat in 11¼ minutes.

Rain Washes Out Stock Car Races

Rain forced cancellation of the featured 20-lap event in last night's debut of the American Racing Association's stock car races at the West Lanham Speedway. A crowd of 4200 saw Lou Johnson, Trenton, N. J., win the first semifinal after taking the third qualifying heat and Wally Campbell, Trenton, N. J., win the second semifinal and the first qualifying heat. Ed Pyson, Langhorne, Pa., won the second qualifying heat.

74-Year-Old Nat Fan Dies at Ball Park

A 74-year-old Nat fan took ill and died last night during the Nat-Red Sox game at Griffith Stadium. The stricken man was Samuel D. Sheppard of 506 Lloyd lane, Alexandria.

Sheppard went to the stadium first-aid room from his bleacher seat at 10:50 p. m., complaining of indigestion. Ten minutes later, he was pronounced dead by Dr. George A. Resta, stadium physician.

Fielder's Hot Chase Of Fly Ball, Matched Only by Firecrackers

Oakland, July 6 (AP).—Firecrackers and fly chasing don't seem to mix.

Norman Lawrence found that out in a sandlot baseball game yesterday.

The 13-year-old outfielder ran for a high fly and was just about to pull it down when some loose matches in his pants pocket ignited.

Unfortunately he also had some firecrackers in the same pocket. Norman forgot all about the game in his frantic efforts to get out of his pants without being burned.

He succeeded.

Cooper Hits Three Homers, Bats In 10 Runs

Cincinnati, July 6 (AP).—The usually mild-mannered Cincinnati Reds, paced by Walker Cooper's three three-run homers, got hotter than the near 100 degree weather today as they annihilated the Chicago Cubs, 23-4, for the biggest score of the major league season.

Cooper, who drove in 10 runs in all, had six hits in seven trips, showing the way in the Reds 26-hit attack on six Chicago pitchers.

Every Redleg scored at least one run during the two hour and 45 minute slugfest and all but Ken Raffensberger, the winning pitcher, hit safely.

Raffy spaced 11 Chicago blows, including former Redleg Hank Sauer's fourteenth homer, in posting his ninth victory as against six defeats

The Reds gave early indication that they had a lot of runs to get out of their system as they scored 2 in the opening round on 4 hits. Starter Walt Dubiel was hit by a batted ball during that inning and had to retire. Warren Hacker, the eventual loser, took over and worked five innings.

Four Cincinnati runs crossed the plate in the second on three hits and two errors.

Sauer connected for his homer, good for two runs, in the third when the Cubs bobbed up with three runs. But the Reds came back with a 6-run outburst in their half, highlighted by Cooper's first homer.

Pirate Rally Downs Cards

Pittsburgh, July 6 (AP).—Big blow in a 3-run 9th was Johnny Hopp's single with the bases loaded to score Phil Masi and Eddie Fitzgerald to give Pittsburgh Pirates a 4-3 win over the St. Louis Cardinals tonight and their fifth victory in a row. Murry Dickson, who pitched shutout ball for six innings, got credit for the win before a crowd of 32,983.

The loss prevented the Cardinals from gaining a first-place tie with Brooklyn.

Steber, Hartley Sign '49 Redskin Contracts

The Redskins announced yesterday that Guard John Steber, formerly of Georgia Tech, and Halfback Howard Hartley, the former Duke star, have signed their 1949 contracts with the pro football team.

Those Wondrous Nats

WHEN IT RAINS, it pours. Bad breaks against our luckless Nats, I mean.

The rains which stopped our game in the sixth inning last night against the Red Sox couldn't have come 45 minuter earlier and made the game unofficial.

No sir. And it couldn't have waited for an hour or so longer so that we could get back those five runs the Sox had on us.

In keeping with our current pattern of bad luck, the rains had to fall, at the most inopportune time possible—with the game barely official, us training, 5-0, and Boston Pitcher Ellis Kinder weakening.

Sure he was weakening. He struck out our side in the first inning. But in our other four times at bat, we rocked him for four hits, and drew two walks. What's more, Ted Williams robbed Eddie Yost of a base hit in the fourth inning with a fine catch.

It's not the first time that we've lost a game like that this season. Earlier in Philly, we were trailing, 7-3, and just starting to peck away at Connie Mack's pitchers. Then all of a sudden, the umps stopped the game in the seventh inning, citing a Pennsylvania law putting a time limit on Sunday ball games.

On the same theme, it's interesting to note that we've lost 11 games by one run, games we could have won by the slightest kind of good break. Eleven one-run losses and those two other games I've mentioned make 13 tough-luck setbacks altogether.

If we could have just won 7 of those 13, our record would be 39-33 instead of 32-40. And we'd be in fourth place instead of sixth.

I wish we were as lucky as we are good.

Ray Shore Figures Army Life Beats Being Farm Hurler

St. Louis, July 6 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns announced tonight the outright release of Pitcher Ray Shore to the San Antonio farm club in the Texas League.

Shore said later, however, he was undecided about joining the San Antonio club. He said he might join the Army. He was a captain in the Army during World War II.

Shore allowed 26 hits, 30 runs and walked 31 men in 23 2/3 innings of relief work. He has been charged with one defeat against no victories this season.

Dodgers Lose On Homer, 7-5

Boston, July 6 (AP).—Tommy Holmes' third homer in his last three games clinched Vernon Bickford's 11th win for the Boston Braves, a 7-5 decision over the top place Brooklyn Dodgers tonight before a packed 34,062 crowd.

Elbie Fletcher homered in the Tribesmen's first two runs in the first inning.

Bickford, however, weakened in the ninth and put the first two batters aboard but Nelson Potter choked off the Dodgers' rally after their fifth scorer crossed the plate.

While gaining their sixth win in nine starts against the National League leaders, the Tribesmen blasted starter Ralph Branca, who also was seeking his eleventh triumph.

Bosox Get 2 in 3d, 3 More in 5-Hit 4th

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Rain did what the Nats were unable to do last night—stop the Boston Red Sox—but it came too late.

Merciful showers washed out the game in the first half of the sixth inning. This unsolicited, but welcome providential blessing restricted the Red Sockers to a trifling 5-0 victory.

When the showers broke, the Sox were in the middle of another rally as Birdie Tebbets had singled and was perched on second with one away.

Ellis Kinder, registering his eighth success, held the Nats to four hits while Joe Haynes and Sid Hudson were bumped for eight in five innings.

Haynes started but pulled a muscle in his right side during Boston's two-run third inning and retired in favor of Hudson who pitched Boston to a 5-0 lead in the next inning.

Hudson's effort went unrewarded, however, as Haynes pitched long enough to be tagged with his fourth loss.

Yost Returns

Eddie Yost was back in the Nats' lineup for the first time since June 8 when he sprained his ankle. His appearance was greeted warmly by the 15,672 Griffith Stadium diehards, but it made no impression on the McCarthy men.

Yost's ankle is still swollen and must be taped heavily. He showed no effects from his injury, however. He handled three chances, none of them too difficult, flawlessly. He got no hits, but Ted Williams had to run a country mile to haul down his line drive and deprive him of at least a double.

Bosox Quit Kidding

Even Yost's appearance failed to snap the Nats out of their newly acquired ability to pass up scoring opportunities. They left only six runners last night, but the game lasted only five innings, remember.

Once they had runners on first and second with no outs, on second and third with one out and another time on first and second with one out. But the box score fails to show any Washington runs.

The Red Sox threatened in the second inning when Bobby Doerr, who got a double and a single, led off with a two-base hit to left, but the Sox couldn't do anything about it.

In the third, however, they quit kidding and cuffed Haynes for two runs. Doerr's single delivered them after a Johnny Pesky double, a walk to Williams and a wild pitch by Haynes.

Five solid hits off Hudson in the fourth inning raised the Boston lead to 5-0. A single by Tommy O'Brien, Tebbets' infield out and a Kinder single got one run in.

Dom DiMaggio, hitting safely in his ninth straight game, doubled, and Pesky's second straight hit, only a single this time, chased in the other two. That's all the scoring weather conditions permitted.

Before the stadium grounds crew, some of whom doubled in brass as vendors, could muster and place the canvas on the infield the field looked like the Potomac at flood level.

Twenty minutes after the shower the canvas still hadn't been placed in position. The crew finally abandoned its task, leaving the green hunk of nylon covering shortstop and short left field only.

IN SHORT—Tonight's finale, originally slated as a day game, will start 30 minutes earlier than usual, at 8 o'clock, to allow the Red Sox to catch an 11 o'clock train for Boston . . . Chuck Stobbs, 20-year-old lefthander from Norfolk, Va., tries for his third victory. Mickey Haefner (5-4) opposes him . . . Kinder struck out the first three Nats he faced, but Clyde Vollmer busted up his streak with a single to start the Nat second. He was singled to second by Eddie Robinson, but the two held their respective bases as futility set in again . . . Hudson tried to get a rally going for himself in the fifth with an infield hit and Sherry Robertson doubled him to third with one away. Nothing happened then, either

Hylan Has 3 Winners At Laurel

It was Joe Hylan night at Laurel Raceway last night.

The canny 54-year-old veteran from Pinehurst, N. C., scored Laurel's first driving triple and set a track trotting record to boot.

Tompkins Hanover, under the smooth handling of the inveterate cigar smoker, went his mile in 2.05 4/5, just three fifths of a second off the pacing standard.

Hylan's other two winners were Flo Napoleon, $21.40 outsider

AT CHARLES TOWN

DEAR FOLKS:

Looks as if we've seen the last of the horse, Walter Haight, in these parts. Stanley Greene jr., sold him at Ascot Park, Ohio, two weeks ago. Seems he became wise in his old age. After sustaining a foot injury, he would suffer long and when finally made sound, would return and show winning form. However, almost invariably he would hurt himself again. Came the day when he was sound and just refused to run, probably knowing that to extend himself meant another session as a cripple. Many expensive horses have developed the same method of being retired. I can't string along with some magazine writers who would have use believe horses are the dumbest of all animals.

With Art Brown given away as a saddle horse, that leaves only Arch McDonald of the one-time "Infamous three" still in action. See you on the rail.

Cacique 2d Runs Second, Off by a Head

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., July 6.—P. A. Rothfus' Flicka Foot, 3-year-old daughter of Boss Hoss, was the boss today in the Winchester Purse, featuring the Wednesday program. The brown filly, with youth on her side, turned back a field of experienced sprinters, including Mrs. J. D. S. Coleman's usually reliable 11-year-old Boston Man. The veteran, heavily played, stumbled at the first turn and finished fourth in the field of six. It was to the tune of a $16.40 mutuel that Flicka Foot lasted to win by a head margin from Tyson Gilpin's Cacique 2d. Two lengths farther back came Wayne Kendrick's Sure Gift to be third, a neck in advance of Boston Man.

Foul claims were registered in both races involving the daily double. One resulted in a disqualification and a suspension.

In the first race, R. F. Livingston's Hiccup, was first to the wire but Sammy Palumbo registered an objection against Willie Gillespie who rode Hiccup. Palumbo claimed Hiccup shut off Mrs. H. Saul's Fire Power entering the stretch. The patrol judge agreed and Fire Power, at $10.60 was declared the winner with Hiccup placed second. The stewards later suspended Gillespie for five days.

The second race went to Penn-Mar Stable's Triflin Neibor at $9.80, the son of Identify getting home a head in front of Mrs. M. M. Dunaway's Frank Moose. Pat O'Brien, who rode the latter, claimed a foul against Ray Arduini. The two horses appeared to collide in the stretch but Frank's Moose, who pulled up lame, was blamed. The daily double on the 3 and 4 combination returned $84.40.

Horse Killed, Jockey Hurt at Charles Town

Charles Town, W. V., July 6.—Jockey Carty Meyerhoffer of Baltimore, Md., was injured and Justin Funkhouser's No Hit was killed in a training accident this morning. Meyerhoffer suffered broken collar bones and undetermined injuries, while No Hit severed his jugular vein and died after crashing into the fence at the half-mile pole. No Hit, a 3-year-ol dson of Shutout and bred by Greentree Stables, ran to the outside fence several times and finished second in his debut here last Saturday.

Middle Atlantic Seniors Play At Burning Tree Thursday

By West McLean
Post Reporter

THE MIDDLE Atlanti Golf Association will hold its senior championship Thursday, July 14, at the Burning Tree Club.

The low gross winner will receive the Walter McCallum Trophy, symbolic of the senior championship of the Middle Atlantic States. The low net winner will receive the Hinshaw Cup and the oldest member to play will be awarded the Tuckerman Cup.

Entries close Monday with the executive secretary of the association.

There will be additional prizes in three age groups: 55-60 is A; 60-65, B; and 65 and over is Class C. There will be a special nine-hole tourney and a 36-hole putting contest.

CHARLES BASSLER is the defending champion in the Maryland State Open championship which will be held at the Country Club of Maryland July 12. The 36-hole medal play championship is open to all professionals and amateurs with a handicap of 6 or less. The pro-am tournament over the same course Monday, July 11, will serve as a practice round for the open.

Army golfers in the Military District of Washington are asked to sign up for the MDW Open golf tournament, July 11 to 16. The top five golfers will represent the MDW in the all-Army championship August 7 to 13 at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. For further information contact the special services office in the Pentagon or at Fort McNair.

The Court House Country Club of Fairfax, Va., opened its new course July 5' Located on Route 123, 2 miles south of the Fairfax Court House, the course will be open to the public for the rest of the summer or until the membership is filled.

This Sunday is the date for the Women's District Open under the auspices of the D. C. Recreation Board, Division G to K. The tournament will be a 27-hole medal play event at Langston golf course.

Blackwell On All-Stars

New York, July 6 (U.P.).—Eight newcomers, headed by major league batting leader Jackie Robinson, were named today to the National League All-Star squad.

Included were seven members each from the Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals.

Pitcher Ewell (Whip) Blackwell of the Cincinnati Reds was the only surprise on the 25-man roster as Manager Billy Southworth followed the Nation-wide poll of fans in making his second team selections for every position except the pitchers. The fans do not vote for pitchers.

Because of an operation, Blackwell has started in only one game and appeared in only eight. Thus, his selection was unexpected. But Southworth said he picked the lanky Redleg "because of his past performance and the fact that he looks as good as ever."

PITCHERS—Howie Pollet and George Munger, St. Louis; Preacher Roe, Ralph Branca and Don Newcombe, Brooklyn; Warren Spahn and Vern Bickford, Boston, and Ewell Blackwell, Cincinnati.

CATCHERS—Roy Campanella, Brooklyn; Walker Cooper, Cincinnati.

OUTFIELDERS—Enos Slaughter, St. Louis; Bob Thomson, New York; Andy Pafko, Chicago.

MANAGER—Billy Southworth, Boston.

COACHES—Burt Shotton, Brooklyn; Bucky Walters, Cincinnati.

BATTING PRACTICE PITCHERS—Vic Lombardi, Pittsburgh; Al Johnson, Boston.

Jack, Giosa Report Tomorrow

Promoter Goldie Ahearn, of the Liberty Athletic Club, last night ordered Beau Jack and Eddie Giosa to report here tomorrow to complete preparation for their scheduled 10-round boxing feature at Griffith Stadium Tuesday night.

Jack is scheduled to step out at 2 p. m. and Giosa an hour later at the Liberty A. C. gymnasium tomorrow and Saturday.

Loss of Good Line Doesn't Mean Loss Of 16-Inch Trout

Malone, N. Y., July 6 (AP).—Eddie Bashant, Malone taxi driver, has a fish story—about the one that didn't get away.

Bashant told friends today it was this way:

While fishing in the Salmon River north of here, Bashant left his rod on a flat rock while he went to talk with friends. Water let through the gates of an up-river power dam flooded over Bashant's fishing spot.

Bashant didn't want to get wet so he left without his tackle.

Later, Bill La Plante, another Malone angler, fished from the same spot. Drawing in his line, he found he had hooked Bashant's lost tackle.

USGA Hits Gambling, Calcutta Pools

New York, July 6 (AP).—The U. S. Golf Association moved today to eliminate gambling from its championship events and strengthen its rules covering amateurs.

Warning that auction pools and sweepstakes might open the way for professional gamblers to take over the sport, the association pointed out that such pools are taboo in competition it sponsors.

"The U. S. G. A. has unequivocally felt it to be in the best interests of the game to prohibit any form of organized gambling at U. S. G. A. championships," said James W. Walker, chairman of the association's amateur status and conduct committee.

He said informal gambling comes outside the scope of the association but added that the ruling body of the game could act if the amateur status of any player should become involved.

"Unfortunately," he said "Some golfers are suspected of making a business of gambling on their golf skill. Much of their income is apparently dependent on their winnings and, in my opinion, such individuals violate the essense of the rules."

Walker also pointed out that a new section had been added to the amateur rules which means a player forfeits his amateur status by "taking any action which clearly indicates the intention of becoming a professional player."

Manager Likes Firemen's Play

Pointing to his eight regulars who are each hitting over .300, Manager Morris Clark yesterday predicted that his Washington Fire Department Baseball Team will defeat the New York Firemen on their second annual meeting July 15 at Griffith Stadium.

He was speaking at a press and radio luncheon at the Statler, where general game chairman Kip Edwards reported that more than $15,600 worth of tickets have been sold through the Fire Department.

Starting pitcher for the local team will be either Buddy Wickers, former McKinley Tech High righthander, who is unbeaten in five starts, or Earl Jennings, who has a 7-1 record. The D. C. team currently boasts an 18-6 record.

Quarterfinals

Doc Johnsen Ousts Lynch In DC Tennis

Dr. Davy Johnsen eliminated Hugh Lynch, 6—3, 4—6, 6—2 yesterday in the quarterfinals of the D. C. men's singles tennis championships at Columbia Country Club.

The contest required approximately 2½ hours of play in yesterday's sweltering heat and turned out to be primarily a test of endurance.

The incessant net rushing of Johnsen in the third set invited high lobs from the tiring Lynch, which turned out to be just what the doctor ordered. Johnsen put such a high percentage away for clean winners that Lynch found it futile to even try for some of them.

In the doubles, Gil Bogley and Dick Squires, the fourth seeded team, took a relatively easy 6—0, 4—6, 6—2 victory from Jack Yates and Edwin Wesely. The uncontrollable temper of Wesely proved as good a weapon for the winning duet as the Bogley volleys and Squires serves.

In the other quarterfinals singles match, top-seeded Barney Welsh accomplished an expected win over seventh-ranking Phil Neff, 6—1, 6—4.

Parker Routs Tourney Foe

Spring Lake, N. J., July 6 (AP).—Frankie Parker of Los Angeles, Davis Cup player who has won the Spring Lake tennis title nine times, today swept Tony Vincent of New York out of the 1949 tourney, *—0, 6—2.

Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, Fla., playing for the first time since returning from Wimbledon, disposed of William Tully of Bronxville, N. Y., without difficulty, 6—3, 6—1. Mulloy won by default yesterday.

Billy Talbert of Wilmington, Del., who is seeded third even though he's defending champion, stopped Sid Schwartz of New York, another Miami collegian, 6—2, 6—1. Schwartz could not cope with Talbert's booming drives.

Age triumphed over youth when Sidney B. Wood, jr., of New York whipped young Dick Savitt of East Orange, Cornell's Eastern Intercollegiate champion, 6—1, 6—4.

Pancho Gonzales of Los Angeles, National champion and the country's first-ranking tennis player, moved into the quarter-finals with a strange victory over Alastair Martin of New York, 4—6, 6—0, 6—0.

When Gonzales, playing far off his form, dropped the first set, an upset of the first ranking seemed in the making. The first-seeded star reversed himself in just as startling a manner, however, and ripped off 12 straight games. He lost only 7 points in the last two sets.

Six Injured In Crash of Streetcars

Six persons were injured, none seriously, when a Capital Transit Co. streetcar plowed into the rear of another streetcar yesterday morning on Wisconsin ave. near Harrison st. nw.

Police said a streetcar, operated by Carlton L. Murphy, 21, of 507 S. Henry st., Arlington, struck the rear of a streetcar operated by Clarence A. Wade, 44, of 3224 Wisconsin ave. nw., which had come to a stop at a loading platform.

Passengers on the streetcar that was struck and treated at Georgetown Hospital were: Eurlee Reed, 35, of 1534 15th st. nw., injuries to head, chest, stomach and neck; Thelma Douglas, 20, of 618 Orleans pl. ne., head and back injuries. Joseph D. Camel, 44, of 1171 Moran st. ne., suffered an injured elbow but refused treatment.

Passengers on the other car treated at Georgetown Hospital were Willie May Hall, 45, of 1256 New Jersey ave. nw., injury to back of head, and Norma May Seales, 34, of 1710 Swann st. nw., possible fractured collarbone. Nancy Pittman, 70, of the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw., received a cut on her mouth and hip injury but refused hospital treatment.

In another street car accident, a passenger's arm, said to be hanging from a window, was broken in several places when a truck swerved against the side of the car.

The passenger, admitted to Emergency Hospital, was William A. Johnson, 37, of 1048 44th st. ne. Driver of the truck was identified by police as John H. Johnson, 29, of 611 Gordon ave. ne. The accident occurred in the 900 block of E st. nw.

The truck driver told police he swerved to avoid striking an automobile that had pulled into the street in front of him.

Fleming Commends Record of No Deaths

Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, general chairman of the President's Highway Safety Conference, yesterday congratulated the District for coming through the long Fourth of July holiday without a single traffic fatality.

In a letter to Commissioner John Russell Young, Fleming wrote: "This happy circumstance is a further demonstration of the fine work that has been done here in behalf of highway safety."

"It also affords," he said, "a most heartening example of what can be accomplished by broad application of the action program recommended by the President's Conference on Highway Safety."

Senate Committee Backs Flanagan

James H. Flanagan yesterday won the unanimous backing of the Senate District Committee for reappointment as chairman of the District Public Utilities Commission. No objections were raised during the brief consideration of the appointment.

His nomination to a third 3-year ferm was sent to the Senate floor for confirmation, which may come today. Flanagan was first named to the $10,000-a-year post in 1943.

Annuities Not Cut

New Pension Plan Passed By Senate

The Senate passed yesterday on consent calendar S 1440,, a bill which amends the Civil Service Retirement Act of 1930 to provide for payment of annuities to widows of retired Government employes without reduction in the annuities of such employes. The bill liberalizes present legislation which forces retired employes who wish to make provision for their wives to accept reduced annuities during their retirement.

The Senate also passed a House bill which establishes 10 positions in the professional and scientific service of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics for the purpose of recruiting qualified personnel to supervise and direct scientific studies of the problems of flight. Holders of the positions are to be paid between $10,000 and $15,000 a year.

In the House favorable action was taken on a bill which increases the maximum per diem allowance of Government employes summoned as witnesses in behalf of the United States from $6 to $9.

Starlings Are Given a Stay

Washington's starlings—whom residents think they can get along without—yesterday survived another close call.

Mr. and Mrs. Starling this time can thank the Senate District Committee for their latest reprieve from a mass death sentence.

The Senate group temporarily shelved the House-approved bill giving the city fathers permission to kill starlings, when Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West confessed that District extermination experts were still stumped as to how the huge starling family could be run out of town.

And somehow or other the controversial birth control question crept into yesterday's tongue-in-cheek committee debate on birds.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.): "Mr. West, has it been suggested that starlings would be wiped out by destroying the little birds' eggs?"

"Yes, that is one of many ideas advanced," replied West.

Chairman J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.): "If you're talking about birth control, folks, I will have to oppose this legislation."

Mrs. Smith: "Mr. Chairman, you can be assured I'm not going to argue you on that point."

Whereupon, McGrath appointed Committee Counsel James Kirkland "counsel to the starlings" and instructed him to return at a later date with a concrete proposal to humanely reduce the starling population.

District Pay Increase Bill Is Signed By Truman

Retroactive Hike Of $330 Affects 7500; Senate Votes Teachers Sick Leave

President Truman yesterday signed the $330 pay increase bill for District classified employes.

The increase, covering some 7500 classified municipal employes, is retroactive to last July when the same amount was given to Federal classified workers.

The bill also grants the retroactive $330 pay raise to foreign service personnel. The same increase was granted in a separate law last week to unclassified District employes, but actual payment will await congressional approval of a deficiency appropriation.

Sick Leave Voted

Meanwhile, the Senate voted a sick leave system for Washington schoolteachers, higher pay for municipal judges and increased pensions for widows and children of police and firemen here.

The measures were among five District bills approved by the Senate with voice votes at the request of District Chairman J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.)

Jerry Kluttz, who writes The Federal Diary, is on vacation. Publication of the column will be resumed when he returns.

For the public schoolteachers here, the Senate voted a paid sick leave system with a 90-day limit on accumulated leave. The House set a 60-day limit when it approved the bill. This difference is due to be adjusted in conference.

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) questioned boosting the limit to 90 days. Senator McGrath explained that the move was made to give teachers the same amount of sick leave civil service employes had. The increase was sponsored by Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.). McGrath said it would add about one-third to the $188,000 annual cost estimated for the 60-day sick leave plan.

Increase for Judges

For the Municipal judges, the Senate voted this scale of salaries: chief judge of the Municipal Court of Appeals, $14,500; associate judges Municipal Court of Appeals, $14,000; chief judge Municipal Court, $13,500; associate judges, Municipal Court, $13,000. The House had voted $13,000 for the chief judges, and $12,500 for the associate judges of both courts. Associate judges of Municipal Court now get $9975, and the other judges of the two courts get $10,000. The bill now goes to conference.

In the pension bill, the Senate approved the same scale of monthly payments the House set for widows and children of police and firemen—$125 a month for widows and $25 a month for children—but added a special $1000 lump sum payment and $500 funeral payment for next of kin of men killed in line of duty. This, too, is slated for conference action. Both bills increase from 16 to 18 the maximum age for receiving children's payments, and increase from 3½ to 5 per cent the retirement deduction paid by police and firemen.

Infant Smothers Face Down in Crib At College Park

William Edward Gentile, four-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Gentile, jr., 4601 Guilford pl., College Park, Md., died of suffocation yesterday at his home.

The infant was found face down in his crib by his mother, Mrs. Nancy Gentile, 22, about 9:30 a.m. Mrs. Gentile, who had just fed the boy's twin brother, Charles R. Gentile, told police she was unable to rouse him.

He was pronounced dead by Dr. T. A. Christensen, of College Park, whom the mother summoned. A certificate of accidental death by asphixiation was issued by Dr. John T. Maloney, deputy Prince Georges County medical examiner.

Chesapeake Killing Sparks Long Dormant Fisheries War

Maryland, Virginia Shellfish Dispute Again Electrified By Crabber's Death

By The Associated Press

Efforts of Virginia and Maryland to solve jurisdictional differences in the Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River have been long and troublesome, and sometimes punctuated with gunfire.

The fatal shooting of a Maryland crabber by a Virginia Fisheries Commission deputy further complicates an already touchy situation which has defied satisfactory settlement by the two States.

One of the most concerted efforts to iron out Virginia-Maryland fisheries problems was started in 1947 as a result of a resolution adopted by the two legislative bodies.

Resolutions Adopted

These resolutions provided for a joint study commission composed of three members from each State. The commission made its study and prepared a report. It underlined the need for joint control in the bay and the Potomac River to halt depleting seafood supplies, crabs, oysters and finfish.

One of the sorest spots in the whole problem has been the oyster question.

The picture drawn from the commission's study of the bay and river problems shaped up like this:

Both States have had widely divergent views on Chesapeake Bay fishery laws, with no coordinated program of controls. Concerning the Potomac River, however, fishing laws were almost identical until 1930, when Virginia passed a law prohibiting dredging in the river.

A similar law was passed by Maryland in 1931. Then in 1934 Virginia repealed the law prohibiting dredging, and legalized power dredging. This was not concurred in by Maryland.

Potomac Fisheries

Another point brought out was the fact that the Potomac River fisheries have been controlled differently from those in the Chesapeake Bay proper. While citizens of Maryland or Virginia may take seafood commercially only in the bay or tributary waters of the State in which he is a resident, any citizens of either State may take oysters, fish, crabs or other seafood from the Potomac.

This provision affecting fishing in the river was the result of the compact of 1785 in which Virginia guaranteed Maryland ships free passage through the capes, in exchange for equal fishing rights in the Potomac River, the bed of which belongs to Maryland.

Old Compact In Effect

The compact still is in effect today, although the right of free navigation of the bay is guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States, which was adopted four years after the compact.

As the catch of crabs, rock bass and other seafood in the bay began to decline in the late 1930's, the need for more rigid regulation became evident.

"Some method of joint control of bay fisheries must be developed if production is to be maintained and increased," the commission reported.

Potomac Controversy

The same situation was found in the Potomac River, where a long-standing controversy had been going on over oyster fishing.

The breach widened as a result of the Virginia action referred to in 1930 and 1934. In 1946 Virginia enacted an even more specific law to permit certain types of power dredging. Maryland again refused on concur in 1947.

These actions opened the door for violations of the concurrent law prohibiting dredging. Some Virginians felt they were justified in dredging by the action of their Legislature, and Maryland dredgers apparently were not inclined to stand by and permit such methods while they were required to use tongs.

Since 1941 Maryland has made persistent efforts to halt dredging violations. Virginia also has stepped up its law enforcement efforts.

This spring the Maryland Legislature passed a bill which would set up a bi-State authority for the Chesapeake and Potomac Waters lying between the two States. This would have to be approved by the Virginia General Assembly and by Congress before such a body could take any action.

been sworn out against Acree by Maryland authorities.

The Maryland warrant had been handed to Maryland State police, who roared south in an effort to obtain custody of Acree.

But while the Maryland officers were halted by Virginia State police just south of the Maryland-Virginia line, the Virginia officials swore out their warrant and went after Acree.

Commonwealth's Attorney E. Elmer Ames, of Accomac County, said he obtained the Virginia warrant on his own initiative following his investigation of the shooting yesterday in Tangier Sound, a part of Chesapeake Bay.

Ames said he had receive no request from Maryland authorities asking issuance of a warrant.

Both warrants charged Acree with murder in the death of 60-year-old Earl Lee Nelson, Crisfield crabber.

Maryland issued a second warrant for Colonna, pilot of the Virginia conservation agency plane which landed Acree on Nelson's 26-foot motor boat before the shooting, and took him off afterward.

Colonna was charged with being an accessory after the fact.

The Maryland warrants were sworn out yesterday by E. McMaster Duer, State's Attorney for Maryland's Somerset County, before Magistrate Marvin Tawes of Crisfield.

Acree's story has been made public through his superiors.

Acree is a World War II veteran who had been sworn in as a State deputy only the day before the shooting. He declared he stepped from the plane to Nelson's boat and sought to arrest the crabber for fishing in Virginia waters. Each of the two States permits crabbing only by its own citizens, and Virginia has begun to crack down on Maryland violators.

Acree was carrying a rifle. He declared Nelson lunged for it several times, and was shot when the gun accidentally went off during a scuffle.

Several other crabbers' boats were nearby, and when the shot was fired they began to converge on Nelson's little vessel. Acree said he was afraid there might be more shooting so, as the plane came alongside again, he boarded it and Colonna taxied away.

Nelson was shot in the right hip, the bullet severing an artery. He bled to death before other fishermen could get him ashore at Crisfield.

Governors of both States ordered an immediate investigation, and for a while yesterday it appeared officials from Maryland and Virginia would meet amicably to discuss the matter, either at Crisfield, Md., at State Police barracks at Salisbury, Md., or at Princess Anne, Md.

But Virginia officials claimed they had not been notified of the meeting, and did not appear. Maryland officers claimed the Virginians had sent a teletyped confirmation of the proposed meeting.

Father of 2 Killed In Argument Over Water Heater

Harry M. Mauz, 47, an oil burner service man and the father of two children, was shot and killed last night in his basement apartment at 59 I st. nw. during what police described as an argument over a hot-water heater.

Mauz was taken to Casualty Hospital. Doctors there said a bullet had entered his left chest and lodged under his heart.

George Burn, 32, an unemployed oil burner service man, was charged with murder. Burn lives in the top floor apartment of the three-story house at the I st. address.

Hearing Today On Home Rule Measure

The House District Judiciary Subcommittee today will resume hearings on Washington home rule legislation.

The hearing will be in room 445 Old House Office Building starting at 10 a. m.

Among the witnesses slated to testify are Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post; B. M. McKelway, editor of the Washington Star, and Frank Waldrop, editor of the Washington Times Herald.

John T. O'Rourke, editor of the Washington News, said his paper would not send a representative to the hearing, but would submit previous home rule editorials to the subcommittee.

Also testifying will be C. Melvin Sharpe, president of the District Board of Education; Jerome B. McGee, of the District Department, American Legion, and Rufus S. Lusk, of the Washington Taxpayers Association.

They are the first of more than 50 representatives of Washington organizations who have asked to be heard on the home rule plan.

No date has been set for continuing the hearings beyond today's session.

Judge Refuses to Let Police Hold Suspect Without Charge

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

A 35-year-old assault suspect was freed under $1000 bail yesterday shortly after a District Court judge delivered an ultimatum to police that they could not hold him without a charge.

The defendant, Dallas O. Williams, 62½ Myrtle st. ne., was released less than three hours after his arrest. He was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon in face of a threat of a writ of habeas corpus.

The case brought the court into session at 4:15 p. m., several hours after it had adjourned for the day. Necessary court officials, police, and Government counsel were summoned by telephone.

Williams, himself, was out on bail after conviction in another assault case before his latest arrest. He has a long criminal record for crimes of violence.

The habeas corpus petiton stated that Williams was beng held for "investigaton." Cited was a local Appeals Court decision of 1939 declaring that detention for investgation is illegal, depriving defendants of the right of bail and is an important violation of civil rights. The Supreme Court condemned illegal detention in four cases during the last term.

Williams, the court was told, was taken from his home where he was visiting his seriously ill 4-year-old child, to the First Precinct police station at 1:30. Three hours later, according to Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin, police were still refusing to place a definite charge against him.

Judge David A. Pine said: "Nobody can be held without placing a charge against him. There is no reason why the charge couldn't be placed in 15 minutes."

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King said police were waiting for the investigating detective to return to the precinct. A radio call was out for the officer, he said.

Impatient, Judge Pine declared: "Without a charge, the detention is illegal. With a charge, the detention is legal. This man will be released if he is not charged."

When King persisted, Judge Pine said he would give police half an hour to place a charge. Police Captain Howard V. Covell agreed to do so by phone immediately.

"What charge are you placing?" asked Judge Pine.

"Assault with a dangerous weapon—a foot," replied Covell.

"A foot!" Judge Pine shouted.

"He stomped the victim," replied the officer. "The victim ha been in the hospital since May 28."

"What is the bond?" asked Laughlin.

"I think $1000 is all right. The man is well known—"

This was said at shortly before 5 p. m. At 5:05, Williams was freed under bond.

Food Poisoning Makes 64 Ill at State Road Camp

Sixty-four prisoners and guards at Virginia State Road Camp No. 30 near Fairfax were taken ill Tuesday night with what doctors described as a slight touch of food poisoning.

One man was taken to Arlington Hospital yesterday morning, not in serious condition. The rest were said to be recovering.

A doctor said the mass attack apparently was caused by something eaten at the noon or evening meal, with an assist from the heat.

Expanded Board At Alexandria Hospital Voted

The proposals, outlined at the last meeting of the corporation, would raise the board membership from 7 to 21 and the corporation membership from 35 to a ceiling of 20.

In approving the change, the corporation added the proviso that the new members be chosen from Alexandria, Fairfax, Prince William, Arlington and Fauquier Counties.

The corporation scheduled a meeting for August 8, by which time the State Corporation Commission is expected to approve the changes.

Gaming Charges Dropped

Four gaming charges filed by police against William Harry Sweeney, 44, of Landover, Md., were dismissed yesterday in Municipal Court. Sweeney was arrested in a raid at a variety shop, 331 H st. ne.

Senate Unit Votes $50,000 Master Plan Slum Study

Committee Follows Lead of House in Refusing Money for D. C. Land Agency

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday voted a $50,000 "master plan study" for District slum clearance.

In so doing, the Senate group followed the House lead in refusing to grant any operating money to the 3-year-old and still penniless District Redevelopment Land Agency.

Further delay in making an actual start on the city's much-studied blighted areas was indicated by the fact that the master plan study would have to be submitted to the Senate and House Appropriations Committees before next May 1.

In settling upon the "slum study' plan of action, the Senate group rejected the following three appeals for funds to promptly tackle the clearance job:

1. Request of Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) for an appropriation now of the full 20 million dollar amount authorized by the District slum clearance act,

2. Reommendation of Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, former chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, for a five million dollar appropriation this year and contract authority for a like amount next year.

3. House - rejected Budget Bureau request for $2,180,000 to start work in the Marshall Heights area—the only slum clearance project on which plans have been completed and which the Commissioners have approved.

Conflicting views were expressed by committee members and staff personnel as to the exact purpose and scope of the proposed $50,000 study.

McCarran, sponsor of the local slum act, told reporters yesterday that the fund could be used to develop "a workable plan to rid the city of substandard housing," and then the committee could "decide how much should be spent next year to put it into effect. Perhaps the entire 20 million dollars ean be appropriated at that time. He said he was satisfied with the Senate unit action.

General Grant recalled, however, that NCPPC—the slum-planning agency under the redevelopment act—has already prepared a so-called master plan for the future development of the city. To date Congress has given $65,000 for its preparation and is presently considering a $20,000 item for printing it.

Grant said he assumed the $50,000 was in line with his recent request for $53,000 to make detailed clearance plans on two or three congested areas in the central portion of the city. The House refused this item several weeks ago.

"When it comes to granting money for actually going into a blighted area," said Grant, "Congress doesn't seem to want to do anything."

Several House and Senate Appropriations Committee members yesterday privately said that Grant has consistently failed to present to Congress enough concrete facts to justify a start on any slum area.

Slim Hope This Year

The Senate's action practically ended any possibility of work on the Marshall Heights project at least for this year.

The Senate Committee decision came up in consideration of the Independent Offices appropriations bill. The group will meet today at 10 a. m. to continue marking up the measure.

Area News in Brief

2 Police Pursuits Net One Fugitive

One of two suspected housebreakers, both of whom were targets for police bullets in separate chases, made a successful getaway yesterday, but the other landed in a cell.

Jesse James Blue, 37, of 1329 Corcoran st. nw., was arrested by Pvt. Girard A. Murena, of the First Precinct, after a chase from an alley near the 800 block of 13th st. nw. into Franklin Park about 5:15 a. m. He was charged with housebreaking.

Murena said he was patroling his beat when he saw Blue emerging from a window of the Decorative Builders, 808 13th st. nw., trying to drag out a television set. Blue started to run, and Murena gave chase, firing six shots. All missed.

Blue finally was stopped in Franklin Park when a passerby, Charles Fields of 3321 Roland pl. nw. tackled him.

Judge Own Witness

Harry L. Carrico, Fairfax County trial justice, used strictly firsthand evidence yesterday to convict a man of violating the county's anti-firecracker ordinance.

Richard Huntt was charged last Friday with displaying explosive fireworks for sale at his Fairfax store. Yesterday in court, Huntt pleaded innocent on the ground that he didn't know whether the fireworks he had were explosive.

Bliss Heads New D. C. Grand Jury

Henry N. Bliss, 61, manager of the Aluminum Cooking Utensil Co. here, yesterday was designated foreman of the District grand jury in session for the next three months.

Bliss

The new grand jury was sworn in before Judge James W. Morris of District Court. Bliss lives at 4000 Cathedral ave. nw. Appointed deputy foreman was Robert H. Sime, 49, of 7121 8th st. nw., an engineer with the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

The other jury members are:

Emerson O. Anderson, 45, of 2525 Ontario rd. nw., cotton chaser, Department of Agriculture; Bernard B. Beasley, 44, of 220 Peabody st. ne., supply assistant, War Department; Mrs. Lillian H. Brent, 53, of 1734 15th st. nw., housewife; Roy S. Clarke, 56, of 3045 Clinton st. ne., mechanical engineer, Public Buildings Administration; Norman L. Cooper, 59, of 3070 Thayer st. ne., electrician, Naval Gun Factory; Mrs. Anna M. Cowan, 60, of 3060 16th st. nw., clerk, Scottish Right Masons; Mrs. Marjorie P. Gillespie, 38, of 1647 Lamont st. nw., claims examiner, General Accounting Office; Alexander G. Green, 40, of 4248 Meade st. ne., mechanic, National Capitol Housing Authority; Frank B. Hayes, 33, of 716 Jackson st. ne., artist, Branson & Hayes, and Miss Pauline E. Hayes, 62, of 1826 8th st. nw., charwoman, State Department.

Also, Christopher C. House, 44, of 2824 14th st. ne., teacher, Cardozo High School; Francis L. Houser, 44, of 3300 Prospect ave. nw., mechanic, Stohlman Chevrolet Co.; Mrs. Mildred L. Kirby, 59, of 1350 A st. se., accounts examiner, General Accounting Office; Stanton Kolb, 36, of 1626 32d st. nw., president, J. Leo Kolb Co.; George H. Lewis, 24, of 5207 Clay st. ne., unemployed; Constantine McCoy, 63, of 931 French st. nw., waiter, Silver Fox Cafe; Douglas Miller, 57, of 4028 Arkansas ave. nw., retired; Herbert H. Silverman, 47, of 906 Gallatin st. nw., clerk, Post Office Department; Mrs. Cora E. Tanner, 47, of 249 W st. nw., maid, Woodward & Lothrop; Thomas E. Walker, 35, 4217 4th st. nw., transportation technician, General Accounting Office, and Rixey T. Hansborough, 52, of 1418 Hopkins st. nw., mail clerk, Navy Department.

Nephew Tries Vainly to Save Man in Patuxent

The drowning of a 58-year-old Washington man in the Patuxent River near Davidsonville, Md., Tuesday was ruled accidental yesterday by Anne Arundel County Medical Examiner John M. Claffy.

The victim, Ernest Jones, 935 H st. nw., was swimming in the river with his nephew, Glover Jones. Jones was pulled ashore by his nephew, but artificial respiration failed to revive him.

Alexandria Takes Health Fight to Court

Alexandria city health officials went to court yesterday in their drive to stop persons from living in back-alley garages without sanitary facilities.

Defendants in yesterday's action in Alexandria Police Court were William Bates, 47; Dolly White, 30; Viola Curtis, 42; Inez Wilson, 38; and Viola Gibson, 41. All live in garages on Delaney's ct. behind 908 Princess st.

Each was charged with living in a place without sanitary facilities and with creating a health menace by depositing human waste in the area.

William W. Brown, 45, owner of the property, was charged with maintaining such places for human habitation.

All pleaded guilty to the charges except Bates, who was not in court, and Dolly White, who pleaded innocent. Brown said he had tried to evict the tenants when he learned he was violating the law. The other defendants verified this, admitted conditions were bad, but told Judge James R. Duncan they had no other place to go.

A. Clarke Slaymaker, city sanitation officer, said from two to four persons—but no children—lived in each garage. His department plans to clean out 20 or more other garages in the same condition, he said.

Hyattsville To Act July 18 On Theater

Hyattsville City Council will act on a proposal for non segregated, legitimate theater at its regular meeting July 18, Mayor Caesar L. Aiello said yesterday.

The National Repertory Theater, Inc., has had an application for a building permit before the council since last February, a spokesman said yesterday. It seeks to remodel the old Arcade Theater building in Hyattsville for stage productions.

A four-man council committee was named Tuesday to study the theater group's plans and specifications, Aiello said. It is to report its findings and make recommendations at the July 18 session.

The theater group spokesman said a building permit has been issued by the Prince Georges County building inspector. A similar permit from Hyattsville also is necessary.

Joint Parley On Play Area Policy Likely

The Interior Department in the next few days will give the District Recreation Board its answer to the board's proposals for taking over the department's local play area facilities.

Interior officials met yesterday to discuss the board's proposal, voted at a by-laws committee meeting on Tuesday. An Interior spokesman said there were some details in the proposal which did not appear "entirely satisfactory." He indicated a meeting would be called with recreation officials later this week to work out details.

Meanwhile, three organizations sent telegrams of protest to Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug.

The Oldest Inhabitants, Inc., over the signature of President William D. Nixon, said it "vigorously" protested against any "surrender" of the department's previously announced non-segregation policy.

Another telegram was signed by the Rev. J. F. Whitfield, president of the Interdenominational Ministers Alliance, and the Rev. W. H. Jernigan, president of the Fraternal Council of Churches of America. This telegram strongly opposed "any compromise" which would "destroy" the possibility of the "development of a democratic program" for use of local recreation facilities in the near future.

Block Near Griffith Stadium Is Selected For Test Project in Rehabilitation Program

OLD FENCES—Alley in rear of 2208 8th st. nw. has objectionable fences. Under Baltimore plan, owners of picket fence would be forced to tear it down, but District officials feel they lack the necessary authority

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Square 2875—an oblong block containing mounds of rubbish, rotting, warped fences, outdoor toilets and overcrowded, weather-beaten houses—has been nominated as the starting point for District Operation Rehabilitation.

The square is the block between 8th and 9th sts., V st. and Barry pl. nw. It lies within a few blocks of Garfield Hospital, Howard University and Griffith Stadium.

E. Milton Dulin, assistant director of the Health Department Bureau of Public Health Engineering, recommended the area as a test project for a committee of city officials to tackle in attempting rehabilitation. Commissioners are expected to approve the selection today.

Panes Broken or Missing

Mrs. Ronnie Andrews, who lives at 2208 8th st. nw., is in the center of the target block. She resides, with eight others, in a five-room, two-story frame structure on which the rent is $28 a month.

The clapboard sidings have not seen paint for many years. Several are warped and a few cracked. Windowpanes are broken and some are missing.

Attached to the back end of the house is an outdoor toilet—the door open, disclosing an open toilet bowl overrun with flies. "We don't lock the door 'cause those men in the alley always break it off so they can use it," Mrs. Andrews declared.

Right next to this is the tiny kitchen, about 6 feet square. Food remnants are still on the uncovered floor. The ceiling almost touches Mrs. Andrews' head as she tidies up the table.

Broom Was Stolen

A little concerned about the floor debris, Mrs. Andrews volunteered, "We had a broom but somebody stole it."

Outside the kitchen door is the water supply—a single spigot sticking up from the ground and surrounded by rubbish. The rubbish heap is typical of those in the area—a bed frame, an old pair of shoes, a discarded suitcase, tin cans, a packing case and strips of wood.

The remainder of the house is dark and unpainted with cracked plaster plentiful.

Have you ever tried to fix up the place? Mrs. Andrews was asked.

"Oh sure, we told the landlord and he sent down somebody to plaster the hole in the kitchen ceiling," she declared, pointing to a 2-foot square of new plaster.

Residents Unexcited

Residents, lazing on the steps and back yards of their small homes, were unexcited by the news of the proposed campaign.

Alexander Brown and Randolph Dobbins, who live at 2243 9th st. nw., agreed "It's probably a good thing." Brown noted casually, "A Health Department inspector comes through here about once a week and writes on a pad and the garbage truck is here every Monday and Friday, but it ain't so clean."

Other men leaning back on chairs lined along the alley watched as a reporter and photographer toured the block. Finally, one grinned and with a sweep of the arm, declared, "Tear 'em all down."

Puddinhead Jones Complains He Was Pistol-Whipped

Alfred T. (Puddinhead) Jones, a delicatessen store owner and at one time prominent in gambling circles, complained to police early yesterday that he was pistol-whipped.

Jones said an unidentified man yanked him out of his car, parked in front of his store at 1 23 S st. nw., about 5 a. m., beat him on the head with a pistol, knocked him to the pavement, then fled.

He told police he was seated in the car sleeping because asthma sometimes prevents his sleeping lying down. He said he first became aware of the man when he awakened and found a hand, not his own, in his pocket.

Jones, who said no money was taken from him, was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for lacerations of the face and back of the head, then released.

After being shown rogues gallery pictures, he told police he did not think he could identify the assailant because blood streamed across his eyes during the attack, obscuring his vision.

Jones has been arrested about 28 times since 1921. He served time in jail twice, once for setting up a gaming table, another time for receiving stolen whisky.

Last September he was quizzed for almost two hours by the special grand jury investigating gambling here.

Mrs. Regan Heads School Board

Mrs. Mark M. Regan, a housewife who lives at 114 N. Fairfax st., has been elected permanent chairman of the new Falls Church School Board.

Named permanent vice chairman in the board's meeting Tuesday night was Dr. Joseph W. Seay, 809 Hillwood ave., a real estate man. Mrs. G. A. Justusson of Annandale was selected board clerk.

Correction

The Washington Post yesterday reported that Mary Lee Benefield, 27, who was involved in the fatal stabbing of Wilbert Pollard, 423 10th st. sw., Monday, lives at 507 2d st. sw.

Residents at that address report that Miss Benefield does not live there. Police records indicate that the woman gave that as her address at the time she was arrested. No other address for her was available.

Fred R. Reh, Ex-Policeman, Is Dead at 57

Fred R. Reh, 57, partially blind vendor of a lunch stand on the Gallinger Hospital grounds, died early yesterday after a heart attack suffered at his home, 1751 A st. se.

Reh, who ran a similar stand until about two months ago at the Veterans Service Center, 14th and Pennsylvania ave. nw., was a former Metropolitan policeman. He joined the force about 1918, held various other "odd jobs" later until he began losing his sight about five years ago.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Ellen Morris Reh, and three children: Mrs. Julia Corona of Seat Pleasant, Md., Mrs. Maudie Denice, 504 3d st. se., and Fred Reh, jr., of the A st. address; a brother, Henry L. Reh, sr., 1300 52d ave. Hillside, Md., owner of the Washington Decorating Co., and two sisters, Mrs. Harry Foxwell of Ballston, Va., and Miss Sarah E. Reh of Arlington, Va.

Services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Saturday in the Gasch funeral home, Hyattsville, Md.

Mrs. Minne Mendelssohn

Baltimore, July 6 (AP).—Mrs. Minnie Dorn Mendelssohn, widow of one of the great composer's descendants, died at the home of a son here today. She was 89.

Born in Brunn, Germany, she was the widow of Ludwig Mendelssohn, a grand-nephew of the great Felix and himself rector of the Conservatory of Music in Berlin in the late 1800s.

Emergency's Nurses Going To AmericanU.

Emergency Hospital's School of Nursing will join with American University this fall in a joint program of nursing education, it was announced yesterday.

The program, first of its kind in the District, has been approved by the D. C. Nurses' Examining Board.

Purpose of the project is twofold, its sponsors admit. The added appeal of campus life should attract more young women to the profession, and the educational benefits make for better graduate nurses, they said.

Under the agreement, student nurses at Emergency will be admitted to the freshman class of AU's College of Arts and Sciences, with the hospital paying the tuition.

$100 Bond Buyers At Rally to Get Free Car Wash

Each purchaser of a $100 Savings Bond will be entitled to a free car wash at the bond rally to be held at 11 a. m. today at the Minit-Man Car Wash, 436 K st. nw.

Speakers will include Leo J. Rosseau, Detroit inventor whose saving bond money financed his Nation-wide car-wash business; Daniel W. Bell, president of the American Security & Trust Co., and former Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Thomas J. Groom, chairman of the District Savings Bond Division.

The rally will kick off a bond-selling campaign by Minit-Man aimed to reach two million car owners.

D. K. Kunkel, ICC Lawyer, Dead at 53

Daniel Herr Kunkel, 53, assistant chief counsel in the Interstate Commerce Commission's bureau of law, died yesterday of a heart attack, suffered in front of his home at 5420 Connecticut ave. nw.

An ICC attorney since 1931, Kunkel argued numerous actions before the Supreme Court for the commission. Among them was a 1943 case, involving the Inland Waterways Corp. which he won, thus sustaining an ICC order fixing grain rates by rail at a lower basis than water rates.

A native of Harrisburg, Pa., he attended Franklin and Marshall College in Pennsylvania, and Harvard Law School, where he interrupted his education to join the Army during World War I.

After several years of private law practice in Harrisburg, he became an attorney for the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission. He was assistant chief of the State commission when he left in 1931 to come to Washington.

He was a member of the board of directors of Government Services, Inc. He also was a past president and member of the board of trustees of the Incomco Club, an organization of ICC employes.

He is survived by three children, Daniel H. Kunkel, jr., of 1315 30th st. nw., George Z. Kunkel and Miss Elizabeth Kunkel, both of the Connecticut ave. address; his mother, Mrs. George Kunkel; a brother, George Kunkel, jr., and a sister, Mrs. Celia Rahill, all of Harrisburg.

Services will be held at 2 p. m. today in Hysong's funeral home, 1300 N st. nw., with burial in Harrisburg.

Herman Kur, Jewelry Firm Owner, Dies

Herman Kur, owner of Kur Jewelry Co., 417 7th st. nw., died yesterday at Doctors Hospital. He had been ill with a heart condition for two years.

Mr. Kur

He came to this country from Riga, Latvia, at the age of 16. He manufactured jewelry in Philadelphia for a few years before moving to Washington.

In 1909 he entered the wholesale jewelry business in Washington, and his firm has been located at its present location since 1919.

He lived at 539 Shepherd st. nw.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Louise Kur; his mother, Mrs. Sarah Kur; and one sister, Mrs. Sonya K. Gorin, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. today at Danzansky Funeral Home, 3501 14th st. nw. Burial will be in the new cemetery of Congregation Tifereth Israel Synagogue.

Truck Victim Not Identified

Identity of a woman struck and killed by a truck Tuesday while crossing the Baltimore blvd. at Berwyn remained a mystery yesterday despite intensive police investigation.

Prince Georges County police at Hyattsville reported efforts to locate the woman's male companion were unavailing. She registered Monday night with him at the Park Lane Tourist Court, 9137 Baltimore blvd., as "Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Austin."

False Address Given

According to police, the couple listed their address on the register as 802 Holt st., Norfolk. The address proved false, officers said. An attempt to trace the license tags of the couple's car also failed.

County identification Officer Edwin C. Cissel, after learning that Metropolitan Police and the Federal Bureau of Investigation did not have her fingerprints on file, asked the press and wire services to print her description.

He said she was from 34 to 36 years old, about 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighed 125 pounds, and had chestnut hair and a fair complexion. She wore a white cotton print dress.

Deaths Reported

The following deaths were reported yesterday by the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the District Health Department. (Figure in parentheses is date of death.)

Mabel Pillsbury, 91, 2123 California st. nw. (2).

The Best Costs Less at Chambers

On the Party Front . . .

THE TABLES will be turned this week when Washington's famous hostess, Mrs. Perle Mesta, will be guest of honor at the National Woman's Press Club tea on Friday.

The "party for the party-giver" will be held from 5 to 7 p. m. in the Chinese room of the Mayflower on the day she is being sworn in as the new United States Minister to Luxembourg.

Mrs. Mesta and the new president of the WNPC, Miss Jane Stafford, and other officers of the club will receive the guests. Among the Washington notables who will attend the party honoring Mrs. Mesta are the Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson, Attorney General and Mrs. Tom Clark, Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, and the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. John Peurifoy.

Meanwhile, the woman famous in Washington for her parties is busily making plans for the Oklahoma Democratic Breakfast Club reunion on Saturday.

Gov. Roy J. Turner of Oklahoma will be the guest of honor at the breakfast which will be held at 9:30 a. m. at the Shoreham Hotel. Mrs. Mesta, as chairman of the executive committee of the Oklahoma Democratic Breakfast Club, announces that approximately 800 people are expected to attend the breakfast.

Oklahoma party officials who will arrive in Washington today to see Mrs. Mesta take the oath of office Friday and attend the breakfast Saturday include W. E. Harber, Oklahoma Democratic National committeeman; Mrs. Maybelle Kennedy, Democratic National committeewoman; J. H. Arrington, Oklahoma State Democratic chairman; H. W. McNeil, advisor to Governor Turner; Col. Forrest McIntyre, executive secretary to Governor Turner, and Joe Jarboe and Raymond Pope, members of Governor Turner's staff.

Acne at Adolescence

Whatever it's called, acne, pimples, or skin eruption, the unsightly "breaking out" so commonly found at the adolescent period is no laughing matter.

Sometimes such a skin disorder may result in permanent scarring. Sometimes it's just a passing thing. It's important in either case to check with a doctor. He may be able to suggest changes in diet that will be helpful. Or he may prescribe medical treatment that would guard against unsightly permanent skin blemishes.

The social aspect is most important. Often a boy or girl, at the very time they should be building self-confidence in their relationships with the opposite sex, are so embarrassed as to avoid contacts as much as possible.

We owe it to our youngsters to help them in whatever way we can with this particular "cross." Unless we do, results may be lifelong, for the self-consciousness that is built up may continue to plague them long after the cause has disappeared.

The Faces Are Familiar

Southampton's Summer Set Includes Many Top Models and Indorsers

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., July 7.—So many of the flossy ladies and gents who indorse beer, creams, cigarettes, who model or are otherwise featured in slick fashion magazines are summering in Southampton its practically a reportorial must to make a small record of their current sartorial foibles. Take petite Mrs. Angier Biddle Duke, who with her husband has recently been indorsing a well known beer. She turns up for a morning at the Beach Club in navy blue and white ticking shorts, flat-heeled, navy blue canvas pumps; a plain silk blouse, a huge Phelps leather handbag plus her trademark—a narrow bow tying back her short straight hair.

Mrs. Constance Woodworth, the beauty editor of Harper's Bazaar who is also famous for her size 10 figure and her blue-white hair, sits on a bar stool in sapphire blue shorts, a topless, tube-like sweater with matching bolero-length cardigan of shocking pink buttoned with tiny buttons. Mrs. Darragh Park, a daughter of the late William McAdoo, who owns the smart dressmaking shop, Chez Ninon, protects her Dresden China complexion with a plaid parasol scarcely larger than a plate. Nona Park wears medium-length shorts of pale pink, buttoned onto a matching blouse with large deeper-pink buttons. Pint-sized Mrs. Fulton Cutting, jr., a favorite Vogue model, turns up for informal suppers in a black shantung suit—its jacket peplumed—a fascinating blouse bought in a Chinese shop in Philadelphia, of coarse silk mesh overlaid with a design scrolled in narrow blue satin bands; it has a mandarin collar and almost nonexistent sleeves.

Mrs. William Gaynor, the former Rosemary Warburton and daughter of the late Mrs. Willie K. Vanderbilt, protects her fair skin in the most ornamental manner. She wears a wide-brimmed, outsize natural straw hat, its apple green bandeau slicing through the brim and covering her hair, bandanna fashion. Her plain white silk dress has a bateau neckline and is girdled high with a wide belt. Mrs. Harry Gray, who poses for the Harper's Bazaar feature, "At My Age," goes in for some, but not all, of the fashions prescribed for ladies over—well, 40.

Edith Gray, who's a sister of the Dowager Duchess of Marlborough and Princess Radzivil, sticks to the broadbrims and the beach coats advocated as suitable, but manages to skip the more chichi aids. Mrs. Jimmy McFadden, who's a topnotch skiier, wears an unusually appealing tennis dress—of knee-length, rough white linen, girdled unorthodoxly with a leather belt. Wide leather belts ornamented with oval silver metal plaques are popular and, oddly enough, often are worn with dressy linen frocks.

The Men Outdo the Ladies

THE men hereabouts outpeacock the ladies. Most colorful dresser is the handsome portrait painter, John Lavalliere, whose assortment of colored slacks and beautifully printed shirts are wonderful to behold. Even the staidest, such as Harry duPont, go in for bright shirts, while the youngest (and sometimes the not so young) appear dressed for a Los Angeles boulevard, in floppy checked plaid and batiked shirts.

There's scarcely a tie in sight before sundown and the only thing to be said for this type of masculine getup is that it's better, considering the general run of torsos, than turning up merely in bathing trunks.

Good Neighbor Polo Policy

OVER on the other side of the island the good neighbor policy is going hell-for-leather. The Argentine El Trebol team—not the Argentinos who played in Hollywood last spring—is practicing like forty. They'll knock off long enough next Friday to attend a barbecue or, in their tongue, an asado, given by polo-playing Charlie and Hazard Leonard. The Argentinos, led by 10-goal player Carlos Menditeguy, leave for Chicago July 14, then go to Detroit, playing two out of three victories against American teams.

They brought up from the pampas some 44 ponies, which won't be sold, but shipped home, after the open championship games in August, for the return matches in October. Two American teams will go to the Argentine. Among the players will be George Oliver, the nine-goal Idaho wonder, Pete Bostwick; Alan Corey, jr., Cecil Smith, Peter Perkins, and possibly Mike Phipps and Winston Guest.

Dorothy Cramer Sails For European Vacation

Miss Dorothy Cramer, daughter of Mrs. R. V. Cramer of Washington, and the late Colonel Cramer, sailed from New York yesterday for a two-month vacation in Europe. She is accompanied by six of her classmates at Connecticut College where she was graduated in June.

PETITE Mrs. C. Girard Davidson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, is a keen sewing student, designs and makes all her own clothes. Here she poses in one of her favorite evening gowns, a crimson brocaded satin, which she made

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

AN old-fashioned sewing bee takes place in a Georgetown garden, as three aspiring seamstresses learn their lessons in the shade of an ivy-covered fence. Students of Julienne, local designer and teacher, they are members of a class that meets three afternoons a week at her residence. Mrs. Fred R. Miller, at left, lends a helping hand to Mrs. Millard Billings as she outlines the hemline with a skirt marker. Smiling encouragement from the sidelines is Miss Ruth Daniels who is at work on a black dress for fall

Everyone's Moving in Sewing Circles

Hemmed in at Home? Dart Out, Join a New Class

By Peggy Preston

THE sewing bug is having a field day in America, biting everyone from grandma to the teenager. Nor is it any respecter of income. High taxes and living costs have influenced rich and poor alike to turn to home sewing as one means of combating budget trouble.

Washington women have joined the national parade back to the good old sewing machine. Classes have sprung up all over town, conducted by schools, colleges, the YWCA, women's clubs and private instructors.

One such group gathers for instruction at the Georgetown home of Julienne, a designer and teacher who is a graduate of the New York School of Design. Classes are held three afternoons a week from 2 to 5; evening classes are conducted twice weekly for women whose jobs keep them chained to a desk during the daytime hours.

Women enrolled in the classes come from all stations in life. There are wives of Government officials; matrons with leisure hours on their hands; young mothers with growing youngsters to sew for, and business girls who want to learn how to make their pay check last longer.

Because the classes are small, they sometimes take on the aspect of a friendly little sewing circle. Students help one another with fittings as part of their own instruction, and often profit by witnessing the mistakes of someone else.

Beginners learn the fundamentals of stitching two pieces of fabric together, then promptly start work on a simple garment. As they progress to other, more elaborate pieces, they gradually learn the art of "finishing," the most difficult part of sewing.

About 75 hours of training is necessary to turn out an accomplished seamstress, according to Julienne. Students, meanwhile, have several new garments to show for their efforts. And, while their last piece of handiwork is the best, they usually are proudest of their first. In fact, most modern women, finding themselves handy with a needle and thread for the first time in their lives, can hardly believe it is true.

Julienne's students, and the hundreds of other Washingtonians like them, are all part of the estimated 52 million women in America this year who are resorting to home sewing. This is against the 10 million estimated figure of prewar years.

This increase of 180 per cent in sewing activity may be proof of a fad, or a trend toward thriftiness. It may be a sign of inflation or deflation. But whatever it is, the gal who is not learning how to sew today is definitely "not in the swim."

Women Today Ask and Get Quality at Budget Prices

The American women today are demanding — and receiving — the best in fabric, finish and fit in inexpensive lines of clothing.

"They are insisting on quality for their money as they have not done in many years," says Miss Beulah Spilsbury, a soft-spoken woman who for 21 years has dealt in quantity, plus quality, as head designer for the firm of Nelly Don Dresses.

Visiting here at the Shoreham Hotel apartment of her brother and sister-in-law, Miss Spilsbury plans to remain for a real vacation before returning to the huge plant in Kansas City, Mo., where the Nelly Don frocks are turned out by the thousands each season.

The miracle of modern production has given American women the chance to dress better than any other in the world, Miss Spilsbury believes. After more than two decades as a designer, she still speaks with awe of her firm's two-block-long factory, where material goes in at one end and comes out a finished product at th eother.

"It never ceases to amaze me," says Miss Spilsbury, whose own part in this process includes the creation of styles and patterns.

With four assistants, she does research in all parts of the country, adapting designs to the habits and tastes of the citizens, and seeking new sources of inspiration.

Miss Spilsbury reveals that Mrs. James A. Reed, wife of the late former Senator Reed of Missouri, still takes a vigorous part in the management of the dress firm which she founded 35 years ago.

"Mrs. Reed is an inspiration to all career women," Miss Spilsbury believes." She has never faltered in her interest in, and enthusiasm for, the work she selected to do."

Chilled Salad For Hot Days

LIME FRUIT MOLD

- 1 household-size package lime-flavored gelatin
- 1 cup hot water
- ¾ cup sirup from canned fruit cocktail
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup canned fruit cocktail
- ¾ cup diced cucumber
- Salad greens

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Blend in cocktail sirup, vinegar and salt. Cool until consistency of unbeaten egg white. Fold in well-drained fruit cocktail and cucumber. Pour into oiled molds and chill until firm. Unmold and serve on salad greens. Serves six persons.

Newlywed Wife Feels Embarrassed and Unfairly Treated Because Her Husband, After Spat Over In-laws, Shuns Home When Her Parents Are There

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I've been married a little over a year and everything is fine and dandy except for one major item, in-laws. John's mother worships him, and before we were married I adored her, but now I see her in a different light.

Even though we don't live with her, we see her a great deal and she tries to be big boss in velvety ways. I may say without prejudice that my mother never interferes; she believes in letting us live our own life.

Six months ago John and I had a spat about our in-laws and we both let off a lot of steam, but I didn't say one word I might later regret about his parents. However, I found out exactly how he felt about mine, and it wasn't flattering; and until then I had always thought he enjoyed their company.

Man Is Gallant To His Parents

FOR A WHILE after that I was afraid to invite my parents to our apartment, and instead I would visit them alone about once a week. Since then things have run very smoothly and now my parents visit us frequently. But please understand, John's parents visit us just as often if not more so—not that this matters.

The problem is that lately I've noticed John always has some excuse not to be home when my parents come, saying either that he has to work late at the office or that it's about time he spent a night out with the boys. I am growing tired of making excuses for him, and I feel very embarrassed when doing so.

It doesn't seem quite fair to me that he drops everything for his parents and is "too busy" for mine when they come. But am I being foolish about this? V. S.

Man's Behavior Very Revealing

DEAR V. S.: It strikes me that the heated spat about parents ignited a "crossed wires" explosion in John's unconscious—in the sense of, and with the result that, he blasted away at your parents with a charge of resentment long held against his mother, but never faced as such, of course, nor ever actively tapped before,—so completely is he the stymied victim thus far of her characteristic velvety drive for dominance.

In all probability he is latently, if not consciously, cognizant of the real warrant you have to sound the alarm against being manipulated puppet-like, as a pair, by his adoring "mom." The threat isn't news to him; rather it is a fate to which he has resigned himself, after long neurotic conditioning in acting the "tame cat" son while keeping his basic rebellious fury buried deep.

Consequently when you put pressure on that sore spot in his feelings, by talking, I suppose, as if he were a dope to permit it, or maybe even her accomplice in the matter, he just blew up savagely and tore into your parents—to your surprise—in "rejecting" vein. This is a typical tangent "attack" reaction of a defendant neurotic, trying to dodge the issue, when as yet unconsciously afraid to face his psychological problems and shortcomings.

It Seems Husband Fears His Mother

TO FURTHER suggest how the neurotic operates—it may be that in that moment John emotionally identified you with his domineering mom, but feeling as dependent upon your love as upon hers, he didn't dare speak honestly with you, any more than he would with her. Hence by association of ideas—the spat being about "parents"—he may have jumped on your parents as his pet peeve, alleged, thus getting in a camouflaged thrust at you, while kicking a straw man with habitual expediency, do you see?

Also it may be that in that moment he took a new, relief-seeking tack, unconsciously, as regards his inhibited rage against domineering mom—and gadfly wife, possibly. In short, he may have made a transfer, unconscious and unpremeditated, of badgered hostility from mom and wife to his in-laws. The in-laws being expendable from his slant, they're safer goats, superficially; and since the tirade, perhaps he's been building a case against them in his mind to suit, and beginning to feel it was always his viewpoint.

Is he being unfair? Definitely. In fact his attitude is psychologically irrational; but perhaps this guide to what goes on may help him win through to sensible married teamwork. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Charm's the Thing . . .

"(Charm)—it's a sort of bloom on a woman. If you have it, you don't need to have anything else; and if you don't have it, it doesn't much matter what else you have . . ."
—Sir James M. Barrie

Recipe for Stewing Fresh Tomatoes

When fresh tomatoes are plentiful, stew some of them to serve along with meat or fish. Remove the skins first by immersing them in hot water, then quarter them and simmer in a deep skillet (without water) until they are quiet soft. Season them with butter or margarine, salt, freshly ground pepper. If desired, celery salt and a dash of all-spice also may be added as well as a little sugar.

About Recipe for Chili Frijoles

CHILI FRIJOLES
(Mexican Beans)

2 coups pink or pinto beans
1 large onion, sliced
1 tablespoon chili powder
3 slices bacon, diced
1 small clove garlic
Salt and pepper

Sauce:

2 cups cooked tomatoes
2 onions, chopped fine
1 teaspoon chili powder
¼ teaspoon salt.

Wash beans thoroughly. Cover with cold water and let stand overnight. In the morning, drain and cover with boiling water; add onion. Cook until tender. Drain and chop beans fine. Add salt, pepper and chili powder. Brown bacon in skillet; add garlic and when brown, remove from fat. Stir in beans and cook until brown. Remove to platter. In same skillet, cook tomatoes, onions, chilli powder and salt until reduced to about half. Force through a sieve. Add more salt and chili powder to taste; reheat and pour over the beans. This recipe serves six.

I would like to know some reader's opinions on the problems of going to Japan for two years. I have gotten some information from official sources, but there are several questions still unanswered. (1) Does everybody really need to have stadium boots on the boat? (2) Do you have to wear pajamas on the boat? (3) What entertainment is provided (if any) on shipboard for young children. Are there any books for them? (4) Is it wise to buy sheets and blankets here or does the PX over there carry good ones? (5) Would it be warm or pretty cool on the Pacific in September? Would topcoats or sweaters be worn all the time by then? (6) Is it really worth while taking a washer—an old one—if one's children are beyond diaper age? (7) How would you carry musical instruments in their cases, such as violin or guitar? Can they safely go in the hold? (8) What things easy to get in America do you miss most in Japan?

IT was an afternoon of surprises for Mrs. Caroline E. Coates (right) yesterday. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley (left) called and invited her to a quiet luncheon at the Kenesaw. On arrival Mrs. Coates found she was guest of honor at a surprise luncheon given by the Women's Christian Temperance Union, who were honoring her for her four years as president. The second surprise came when Mrs. Wiley presented her with a $50 greenback bouquet from the members of the WCTU. Mrs. Coates also received from Mrs. Frederic N. Newburgh a scrapbook of local newspaper clippings amassed during Mrs. Coates' term of office

Corrective Exercises

By Ida Jean Kain

CAN sagging of the bust be corrected when the fault is not due to posture or weight?

In many instances, yes. But first it is important to understand about the glands, ligaments and muscles. While the breasts are not composed of muscle, they are held in place by muscles and ligaments. So it follows that proper tone in the supporting tissues is essential to normal position.

The breasts are delicate organs located in front of the pectoral muscles. Proper position depends on the tone of the ligaments reaching up to the collar bone, and on the tone of the pectoral muscles which lie just under the skin and cover the chest. These muscles are attached to the inner part of the collarbone, follow down the whole length of the sternum and fan out across each side of the chest, and the handles of the fans insert into grooves in upper arms.

Muscle Tone Lacking

THE sagging breast is almost always due to decrease in tone of the ligaments and to a lack of tone in the supporting pectoral muscles, resulting from strain of weight on the supporting tissues, as well as from general loss in body tone. Excessive weight cannot be overlooked, since it adds to the sag. This not only points up the importance of normal weight always, but also the importance of wearing a well-fitted uplift brassiere during special periods such as pregnancy and the nursing period—and the equal importance of follow-up exercises to restore tone.

If the sagging has been allowed to continue for years, no one can promise that the ligaments and muscles can be restored to normal tone. But exercise is a real help, for it increases the tone in the particular ligaments and muscles and also improves general body tone, which is all important. The key to effective exercise is that the pectoral muscles insert in upper arms.

Proper Exercises

A GOOD resistance exercise is to pull up to tip toes on a stretching bar. Or cup one fist in the other palm in front of chest—resist with one arm and push with the other. The back stroke as copied after swimming is excellent. A natural for young mothers is to push their child in a swing. One young mother who did, 50 times a day all year round, found it to be the perfect exercise.

With a heavy bust, it is well to wear a bra while exercising, with the support from underneath, and arm straps free.

Cooking Cues

Who says meat balls can't be elegant? Add a touch of the right seasoning and the homely meat ball can be served at the most formal function. Thoroughly brown tiny balls of ground beef, veal, or lamb in fat. Make gravy with the pan drippings and season with a little curry. Simmer the meat balls about 15 minutes in the gravy.

Creamed white onions may be combined with hard-cooked eggs for a luncheon casserole; sprinkle with grated yellow cheese and put under the broiler or in the oven until the cheese is lightly browned.

Watergate Enthusiasts Brave Rain

By Paul Hume

"If the conductor's wife can sit through the rain, so can a critic's fiancee," I shouted last night as the Watergate concert was interrupted by rain—which no one could call unwelcome. The large audience merely covered itself with pillows, newspapers and Paisley shawls while it waited for the rain to stop.

Earl Wild, pianist, and Howard Mitchell were playing the Grieg through increasing gusts of wind and rain. The audience displayed varying degrees of affection for music as some fled while others sat.

Wild stopped at one point in the first movement cadenza. The rain had become more than impolite to him and the keys of his grand piano were too wet to keep under control. But the audience was loyal, and in a few minutes he and Conductor Mitchell returned to take up the music where they had left it.

By then the man at the controls of the amplifying system had left his knobs to the mercy of wind and rain, stopping only to cover them up. The rest of the concerto came through in good balance with no help from human hands save those of the performers.

Wild plays the Grieg with affection more than from any desire to overplay its dramatics. He is exciting where excitement makes sense and lyrical where Grieg sings his beautiful lines. The orchestral support was superb in precision at tricky points, and suave in the quiet passages.

Earlier in the unsettled evening Mitchell gave a fine reading of Milhaud's Suite Francaise. Though not uniformly as interesting as the Suite Provencale, this second score, originally written for band, has the same kind of folk lure.

Haydn's Symphony in G Major, known as the "Surprise" came almost as a novelty, so long has it been since we last heard it. After a slightly rough first movement, the andante, and especially the menuet and finale, came off brilliantly.

Mary Howe's Agreeable Overture was heard in its first performance by a large symphony. It is indeed agreeable in the sense that it is well made and full of good melodic ideas. Its scoring seemed a bit light last night. This may have been due to the placement of microphones. It would be well to hear it indoors before further judgment.

The orchestral playing was well ahead of opening night. The audience was encouragingly large, and shouted its approval after the rain-swept concerto. Your writer is indebted to the young lady in front of him for holding her score of the concerto over her head during the rain. It enabled him to check on the soloist during most of the last movement.

Friday night! Mischa Elman in Lalo's Spanish Symphony.

Assembly Call On Jobs Asked

Baltimore, July 6 (AP).—The Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council (CIO) today called for a special session of the General Assembly to meet "a grave unmployment situation which is growing worse."

President Frank J. Bender of the CIO group told the legislative council—interim committee of the General Assembly—that there are now 60,000 jobless in the State.

He urged the council to recommend the special session to Governor Lane.

The CIO group specifically wants the Legislature to repeal two changes in the Maryland Unemployment Security Act made in the 1947 session, Bender said.

One proposed change would return unemployment compensation payments to two thirds of the average weekly wages, instead of one half, as established in 1947.

The other would eliminate the requirement that applicants for jobless benefits must be "actively seeking employment."

Bender said that conditions have changed considerably since the 1947 changes were made.

There was a demand for labor at that time, he said. Now, he contended "there is no work to seek."

He said the situation is the worst in western Maryland and that one third of the workers in Allegany County are unemployed.

Diana Roosevelt, GWU Classmate Will Wed Sept. 17

Detroit, July 6 (AP).—Miss Diana Roosevelt, a niece of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and a grandniece of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, will wed a George Washington University classmate September 17.

The engagement of Diana and Agar Jaicks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Askin-Jaicks of Lake Forest, Ill., was announced today by the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Dorothy Kemp Roosevelt of Birmingham, Mich., a Detroit suburb.

Diana's father, the late G. Hall Roosevelt, was a brother of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Schweitzer Lauds Goethe As Sensible

Aspen, Colo., July 6 (U.P.).—Albert Schweitzer, the world's foremost authority on Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, said tonight the German poet-philosopher reached greatness through "common sense."

The speech by the missionary from South Africa sounded the keynote of the 20-day festival here in honor of the 200th anniversary of Goethe's birth.

Two thousand Goethe followers filled every seat tonight to hear Schweitzer's speech. The talk was interpreted by Dr. Emery Ross of New York.

Schweitzer quoted Goethe as saying: "My point of view has always been that of common sense."

"To be a realist in order to win through to true spirituality—that is Geothe's keynote," Schweitzer said.

Truman to Address Shriners on July 19

President Truman will address the national Shrine convention in Chicago July 19.

The White House announced yesterday that Mr. Truman has accepted the invitation and will fly to Chicago in his plane, The Independence.

He will make a formal speech to the Shriners in Soldier Field some time between 3 and 4 p.m. (EST) July 19.

Mr. Truman will make another informal talk that evening at a dinner in the Stevens Hotel honoring the retiring imperial potentate, Galloway Calhoun of Tyler, Texas.

What's the Verdict?

DRUNKEN COWBOY

Q. A cowboy stopped for a drink at a tavern before the long ride home. He intended taking only one drink, but you know how it is. As he became drunk, he became abusive. The tavern keeper warned him: "If you keep this up, I'm going to have you thrown out." Nevertheless, the cowboy's manners grew worse, so the tavern keeper called the bouncer. The bouncer shoved the cowboy through the swinging doors, plunging him head first into a hitching post, causing severe injury. The cowboy sued for damages for unlawful assault and battery, and the tavern man insists the case should be thrown out of court because of the cowboy's contributory negligence. Is he correct?

A. In a personal injury case caused by negligence, it is a good defense that the person injured was contributorily negligent, and therefore may be said to have brought on his own injury. But here, the charge is unlawful assault and battery, which is not a matter of negligence or contributory negligence. If the cowboy was misbehaving in the tavern, the owner had a right to eject him, but not with excessive force. The fact the cowboy was warned, and continued to drink, would bear on the question of how much force was necessary for ejectment, a matter for the jury to determine; but would not cause the case to be dismissed as constituting contributory negligence.—F. L. D.

The publishers of Look and Quick will decide next month whether to proceed with the publication of a new fashion magazine . . . The spouse of the author of a current play saved it from closing by sending two-tickets-for-one cards to every doctor who ever had treated them, as well as to all their dentist friends, tailors, grocers, etc.

LEO LINDY, the restaurateur, was one of 10 men who were tapped for $1000 each to pay the expense of digging a water well at a Westchester educational institution. "Okay, I'll do it," Lindy told the rich philanthropist who tapped him, "but don't forget to cut me in for a piece when you dig for something else besides water."

ALEX D'ARCY, the screen actor, has been unable as yet to get a film release on the movie he made at the French Riviera last summer—the movie in which Zanuck, Orson Welles, Elsa Maxwell and all the Riviera regulars appeared. D'Arcy says it's cost him $25,000 so far . . . Mary Martin's exacting routine in "South Pacific" requires her to take three showers a day and five on matinees. Most of the shorefront estates at Sands Point were overcrowded Monday afternoon by streams of unexpected visitors—men, women and children whose boats were washed ashore by the squall and who were made welcome.

PROF. EDWIN BORCHARD of Yale and Murray T. Bloom are collaborating on a magazine article, bringing up to date Professor Borchard's book, "Convicting the Innocent." Borchard, former law librarian of Congress, succeeded in getting a law passed to compensate persons who were wrongfully convicted and jailed. The Federal law was passed in 1938. Since then, only one man won compensation under that law. The Circuit Court of Appeals set aside his conviction, although there was evidence of guilt. He was freed because he hadn't signed a waiver of immunity, before testifying before the grand jury. And although freed on a technicality, he sued as one wrongfully convicted, and won $5000.

THE Hollywood Picture Industry Council, created to study the film world's public relations program, now is functioning smoothly after some internal clashes which almost wrecked it at the start. One member, in explaining the transformation, said: "We merely applied techniques which were as much Trygve Lie as Ivy Lee" . . . Sarah Churchill, who had her gowns—the ones she intended using in "Philadelphia Story"—designed for her in Europe, found they were too warm for use in summerstock and abandoned them for some ready-made dresses she found in Princeton.

MR. CANYON, WERE YOU SURPRISED TO FIND OUT THAT MISS SMITH IS ENGAGED TO ONE OF THESE DRAGONFLY PILOTS?
WELL -I-UH...
GEE, I WAS!... I THOUGHT SURE YOU HAD HER READY TO GO STEADY—THEN UP POPS THIS MAN WHO HAD HER UNDER PREVIOUS CONTRACT!
DOESN'T THE WHOLE THING MAKE YOU FEEL SORTA FOOLISH?
AHUM—REED, I THINK YOU AND I SHOULD HAVE A LONG TALK ABOUT THE STRATEGY OF TACT!

JOE PALOOKA

HA!... DOC... HA!
JOE, IT'S ANTONIO.
GET IN HERE... THIS IS MARVELOUS... GOOD BOY...
ALLO, JOE..
ANTONIO... ME BIG HAPPY!
WHY ISN'T TONY HERE? WHY DIDN'T HE COME TO OUR WEDDING WITH YOU, DEAR?
ON OUR WAY BACK, DOC CAVED IN... THE CAPTIVITY AND THE ORDEAL HAD WEAKENED HIM...

MICKEY FINN

I-I DON'T GET IT, CHIEF! WHAT DID THE NAME "KAZTIX" MEAN TO YOU?
A MAN NAMED KAZTIX RAN A PACKING HOUSE OVER ON THE SOUTH SIDE DURING THE WAR, SHERIFF - AND I REMEMBERED THAT HE WAS CAUGHT SELLING BLACK MARKET BEEF!
OH, YES! IT WAS IN ALL THE PAPERS AT THE TIME! HE WAS HEAVILY FINED -AND WENT OUT OF BUSINESS!
RIGHT! AND YOU MAY ALSO REMEMBER THAT HE WAS SUPPOSED TO BE TAKING THE RAP FOR SOMEBODY HIGHER UP!
HMM-MMM! AND YOU THINK KRUNCH WAS THE MAN HIGHER UP? AND THAT HE OWES THE GOVERNMENT PLENTY -FOR TAXES?
YES! AND I THINK THE LITTLE BLACK BOOK MAY PROVE IT!
DELANEY! GET ME THE LOCAL OFFICE OF THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT -AND QUICK!

PENNY

AND TO THINK I FIRST MET HIM SITTING RIGHT AT THIS VERY COUNTER.
GEE!
HE'S THE MOST GLAMOROUS, ROMANTIC, UTTERLY ATOMIC DREAM MAN.
GEE!
I'LL REMEMBER THE FIRST PRECIOUS WORDS HE SPOKE TO ME 'TIL THE DAY I DIE.
GEE, WHAT WERE THEY?

DOTTY

HORACE DRIPPLE, YOU'LL HAVE TO STOP THIS EATING IN BED EVERY NIGHT!
BUT, DOTTY- EATING IN BED IS A MARRIED MAN'S SACRED RIGHT!
THAT'S ANOTHER THING THEY SHOULD PUT INTO THE MARRIAGE CEREMONY!

OZARK IKE

OZARK, WE ALL MISS OUR BAT GIRL ..WE KNOW HOW YOU FEEL WITH HER GONE!..
..BUT YOU CAN'T RUN OUT ON THE BOYS NOW!..THEY HAVEN'T A CHANCE OF WINNING THE PENNANT WITHOUT YOU IN THE LINE-UP... SO UNPACK THAT BAG AND FORGET ABOUT DINAH UNTIL WE'RE UNDER THE WIRE!
AWRIGHT, M-MISTUH SKELLEY... AH'LL (CHOKE) TRY!
EASIER SAID THAN DONE, AS THE BUGS WILL SOON DISCOVER!

Postal Card Drive Fights Health Plan

By Drew Pearson

Latest gadget the American Medical Association lobby is using in the pressure campaign against Federal health insurance is a postcard, distributed from doctors' offices, which threatens vote retaliations against members of Congress who support the health program.

PEPPER

The card reads: "As for myself and family, which consists of — votes, we are unalterably opposed to compulsory health insurance or any other legislation which tends to regiment our population and socialize our Government."

The sender fills in the blank with the number of votes in his family. Senator Pepper of Florida, a leading sponsor of health insurance, reports he has received hundreds of the stereotyped cards. Some have also been mailed to President Truman.

One sender, whose wife recently underwent an operation, wrote Pepper that he was "compelled" by the doctor performing the operation to fill out and sign the card. Another reported that he feared he would "antagonize my doctor and nurse" if he didn't comply with their wishes.

Old Soldiers

Five hundred forgotten soldiers, who survived past wars but are victims of old age, are waiting to get into the National Soldiers' Home at Washington.

But there's no room.

Those on the inside would like to make room by building new quarters. They have plenty of money—33 million dollars, every cent contributed through the years by enlisted men. But the money is held in trust by the Treasury Department, and the former soldiers can't get it out without an act of Congress.

Though this money belongs to the soldiers and not the taxpayers, the Budget Bureau has turned down a request to release $16,700,000 to expand the Soldiers' Home. The bureau's recommendation has influenced Congress to refuse use of the funds—despite the fact that the Soldiers' Home hasn't been expanded since 1911.

Meanwhile, the waiting list of aged, lonely former soldiers is growing longer.

Threat to Berlin Airlift

The public was never told how the Bendix strike at South Bend, Ind., involving fewer than 6000 workers, came closer to grounding the Berlin airlift than the Russians ever did. That was the reason the Air Force urgently summoned both sides to the Pentagon last week to settle the strike at a dramatic, all-night session.

Here, for the first time, is the inside story:

After negotiations broke down at South Bend, Air Force Secretary Stuart Symington personally invited Bendix Boss Malcolm Ferguson to Washington. Simultaneously he sent an Air Force plane to Detroit to pick up Walter Reuther, chief of the United Auto Workers.

The two men were brought in to see Symington separately. The Secretary warned both that plane production would be crippled, the Berlin lift forced down for lack of key parts—if the strike continued.

It was Reuther who suggested they sit down on the spot and settle the strike.

"With all this talent from both labor and management," he declared, "if we can't settle this strike, then it just plain can't be settled. And I'm willing to sweat it out."

Ferguson was brought in, and the two men met face to face.

"I am convinced that by using the Democratic processes," Reuther offered, "we can settle this strike, and by doing it in that way, we will enable the Air Force to continue to defend the democratic processes we are using.

Assistant Secretary of Labor John Gibson also was called in, offered to serve as arbitrator.

For several hours the two sides haggled behind closed doors, took time out only for quick snacks. Symington kept a Pentagon kitchen open all night to accommodate them.

By 3 a. m. the negotiators were still deadlocked. Finally Reuther blurted out: "The thing that bewilders me is how a situation that has dragged out 10 weeks and should have been settled at the outset, yet has been handled with good faith and good will and intelligence, could have gotten so 'snarled' up as it is tonight."

Reuther used one word that can't be repeated here which caused the tense, solemn group to burst out in laughter. This broke the ice and started the negotiators on the road to settlement. By 11 a. m., almost 24 hours after they started negotiating, an agreement was reached.

Sun-baked
HAIR NEEDS THOMAS CARE
Oddly enough, summer is both the best and worst season for your hair. Best, because hair grows faster in the summer than at any other time. Worst, because the hot rays of the mid-day sun, plus excessive perspiration, may leave your hair dry, straw-like, brittle, and faded. Therefore, you should start now to give your hair proper care and attention. By starting now you learn how to make the sun help (not harm) your hair and you take advantage of the fact that hair grows faster in the summer.
Consult a skilled Thomas hair expert today—in private, without charge. Let him show you exactly how the reliable, 20-year proved Thomas method provides proper hygienic care for your hair, removes itchy dandruff scales, and leaves your scalp with a clean, fresh, healthy feeling.
